San Francisco Bay.
Oakland's Airport.
Big Steel Is Here.
John D. Saves Trees.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

OAKLAND, Cal., Aug. 8.

HERE two big cities sit and look at each other across the bay, Oakland and San Francisco, and around the bay the other cities, Berkeley, Alameda, San Leandro, Hayward, etc. United, some day they will be, their population would be 1,500,000. Ignoring political divisions, t: is the biggest city on the Pacific coast. Los Angeles will not object to th t, for Los Angeles expects to pass 1,500,000, soon.

OAKLAND, where this is written, is a great industrial, railroad and aviation city. Airships start from here, and go everywhere. East to the land of big money, north and south to the lands of promise, and west over the Pacific. Plenty of flying room here.

OAKLAND, one of the first big cities to realize the importance of flying, has one of the best airports in America, and the only hotel devoted to aviators exclusively. It is owned by t e city.

People out here feel that they can do some things for themselves and do not always need a corporation to do it, and take the profit, if any.

FLYING, which is here and all over the world to stay, will build the west coast as nothing else could. Men that have a billion, of their own, or under their control, are too busy to see this coast, slowly by rail. They cannot appreciate it, without seeing it. Soon they will see it from the air.

EVERY place in the west has something that no one else has. Skagit County, State of Washington, for instance, grows 83 per cent of all the cabbage seed grown in North and South America. You would never have guessed that.

ANOTHER section grows hay, so thick that after you have cut and piled it in heaps, there is no room to drive the wagon onto the hay field. Do not laugh, the commander of the United States battle fleet, now anchored in Puget Sound, guarantees that statement.

OAKLAND is proud of being "the most prosperous city in the world." Statistics prove it. The population has grown steadily from 150,174 in 1910 to 361,200 now. Be sure to see Oakland, when you visit the west.

SOMEBODY has described this coast to Dr. Farrell, head of "big steel." He is about to absorb the Columbia Steel Company, biggest on the coast. That is a good thing for the coast, and for United States Steel.

JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER, JR., independently well off, not trying to make more money, comes here, and gives $2,000,000 to buy up and protect from destruction, the forests of giant redwood trees. That is a service to all humanity. Some of those trees were 2,000 years old when Christ saved the poor woman from men that would have stoned her.

IF WE return to live again on earth, as we may do, Mr. Rockefeller as a plain laborer, might eat this noon meal in the abode of one of his own sequoias and not know it.

ALL who come west see San Francisco.

It is warm in winter, cool, in summer.

Not everybody sees the University of California medical school, in San Francisco, and that's a mistake. Some o' the ablest scientists in the country, work there, encourag the ignorant by answering questions.

THAT great school proves that good comes from evil. Mr. Hooper made a fortune, cutting redwood trees, then, slowly, died of a painful disease of the glands, called myxodema. He gave $2,000,000 to the medical school, that such diseases might be studied and conquered.

DR. HOWARD MORROW, distinguished expert in skin diseases, would like ladies to know that many of their face troubles come from indigestion. Lupus, so disfiguring, can be cured by injection in the veins, of a gold solution. And cancer is treated successfully, when taken early, by "radium gold seed," planted in the cancer. The seeds are tiny tubes of pure gold containing microscopic particles of radium. Fifteen or 20 may be planted in the tongue. They are never taken out.

DR. ERNEST WALKER, who has just spent 18 months in Hawaii studying leprosy, tells you, with many modest scientific reservations, that leprosy, probably, is not contagious. Lepers that rang bells as they walked covered their faces and called out "unclean," went to unnecessary trouble.

ONE leper does not get the disease from another, but from a fungus in the ground. Dr. Walker has produced the disease from the soil without the assistance of a leper. Rats are used in the experiments. They have a leprosy of their own, and perhaps carry leprosy, as they do bubonic plague, and other terrors. Kill rats and flies.

IN THAT, as in other scientific centers and laboratories, scientists work for an annual pay that a tenth rate young go-getter of the automobile trade would reject haughtily. But your true scientist would not abandon his work, if you offered him a million.

IT is hard to believe, but some men find working for science and humanity more interesting than working for money. Whichever work interests you, you can

SNOOK DESCRIBES KILLING CO-ED

DOCTOR NEAR COLLAPSE ON STAND

Professor Tells Own Story of Theora Hix's Death; Says He Hit Her Four Times

By JAMES L. KILGALLEN,
International News Service.

COLUMBUS, O., Aug. 8.—Dr. James H. Snook wept on the witness stand today as he confessed that he murdered Theora Hix, co-ed beauty, and described, with dramatic emphasis, exactly how he did it.

"I hit her with the hammer as we quarreled in the car, parked on the rifle range," he testified amid deadly silence in the crowded courtroom. "I hit her again, and again.

"As she slid out of the car, I struck her one more blow with the hammer and she staggered and fell, her head striking the running board.

"The next thing I remember I was sitting on the running board, my head in my hands."

SNOOK NEAR COLLAPSE

Snook, hitherto cold as ice on the stand, shivered. He seemed on the verge of a collapse.

For a full minute he paused, not uttering a word. The courtroom clock could be heard ticking. Then, removing his nose glasses and wiping his eyes, he moaned:

"Heavens knows, she was a good friend of mine. I never thought that I would do it."

FANS TO GREET M'KECHNIE

Many of Bill McKechnie's friends and admirers will be at Forbes Field this afternoon when Skipper Bill sends his Redbirds against the Pirates. The manager who led the Cards to the National League flag last season is back with almost the same lineup he carried to top honors in the Heydler circuit.

The opening fight of a two-game series may bring together Grover Alexander and Ervin Brame. McKechnie also has Harold Haid in readiness, while Larry French is a Pittsburgh possibility for slab duty. French has been ill for a couple of days but is just about ready again.

The Pirates will wind up their long home stay tomorrow as they close with the Cardinals.

The 18-Day Diet Reversed

Do you want to get fat?

Many of the prominent movie stars of Hollywood really want to GAIN weight.

So, girls—and boys too—if you want to gain that extra poundage which you think would add to your attractiveness and general health, here's a way of trying to do it:

Louella O. Parsons, noted movie writer, who first brought forth to the general public the now famous 18-Day Diet to reduce, has obtained from Dr. George Parrish, Commissioner of the Department of Health of Los Angeles, a detailed diet and plan on how to gain weight.

It will appear exclusively in the Sun-Telegraph Sunday. Don't miss it!

DONOHOE DEATH SOLUTION NEAR

By SHELDON REED,
Staff Correspondent.

UNIONTOWN, Pa., Aug. 8.—The solution of the Donohoe murder mystery is just around the corner. Investigators tracking the slayers of the former constable, politician and racketeer needed only a few details of evidence today before they could make arrests.

Whether these missing links of evidence can be supplied within a day, a week or a month was problematical. Sergt. John Tomek, regarded as a master analyst of evidence, joined the staff of technicians working to fill in the gaps.

It was expected that at least three, and probably four men would be charged with the slaying. Other arrests on lesser charges involving liquor deals and graft

U. S. Steel Up to 221

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—Favored railroad and steel stocks today took the lead in the upward movement of prices on Wall street, with U. S. Steel common going through to 221, up 5½ points to a new high record. It is now confidently believed that a 3-for-1 split-up in the stock will be ordered by the directors this fall, after the authorized capital has been raised from 12,500,000 shares to 25,000,000 or more.

American Steel Foundries advanced 3 points to 67½; Bethlehem was up 2 points and new gains of a point or more were recorded in Crucible, Youngstown and other steel shares.

In railroad stocks, Atchison led off with a 6-point jump to 271½. Baltimore and Ohio sold up 1½ at 134; Chesapeake and Ohio up 1¾ at 225; Erie up 2 at 86½; Katy up 2 at 58½; New York Central up 3¼ at 235; Southern Pacific up a point at 143.

SUSPECT HELD IN KILLING HERE

Surprised at his home by detectives, Joe Pangallo, 36, of 805 Eighth avenue, McKees Rocks, was arrested today and charged with the murder of Steve Monastero, alleged North Side bootleg king.

Members of the city homicide squad, under Lieut. David Corbett, had prepared for a battle. They surrounded the Pangallo home before Corbett entered with drawn revolver and seized Pangallo. Lieut. Corbett said three revolvers were found in the house.

Corbett declared he was positive Pangallo was one of the men who drew up in front of St. John's Hospital Tuesday night and shot down Monastero as he was entering the institution to visit a friend, Charles Spallino.

BLACK HAND THEORY

A new theory is being checked with the arrest, expecting to reveal the slaying as part of a Black Hand

Zeppelin Bulletins

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—The liner President Roosevelt wirelessed the United States Lines today that it had sighted the dirigible Graf Zeppelin at 8:35, Pittsburgh time, this morning. At that time the President Roosevelt, which is due here tomorrow, was at position 40:55 north, 64:33 west, and the dirigible was 30 miles to the south of her.

CHATHAM, Mass., Aug. 8.—Flying at an altitude of approximately 1,000 feet above the Atlantic and headed east, the Graf Zeppelin was sighted today by the freight steamship, Commercial Trader.

Wireless reports sent shoreward by the operator aboard the Commercial Trader stated that the big dirigible was seen above the steamship in latitude 40:15, north longitude 67:20 west, that being the position of the freighter at the time.

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—The Graf's position at 8 a. m. today was 375 miles east of New York over the Atlantic at 40 degrees, 38 minutes north; 65 degrees, 43 minutes west. The position was received by radio from the Graf.

Films for Sunday Shows in Parks Announced

Mayor Charles H. Kline has announced the program for next Sunday night's free motion picture shows in four city parks, beginning at 9 p. m.

"Wings" will be shown in Schenley Park; "The Enemy," in McKinley Park, South Hills; "Thief of Bagdad," in Highland Park, and "The Yankee Clipper," in East Park, North Side.

Yesterday Mayor Kline ordered the North Side movies transferred from West Park to East Park, because last Sunday's showing interferred with religious services held in the former park.

WORLD-GIRDLING AIRSHIP SPEEDS OVER OCEAN AT 60 MILES AN HOUR

(Copyright, 1929, by International News Service.)

ABOARD GRAF ZEPPELIN, Via Radio, Aug. 8.—The Graf Zeppelin, on its first leg of its flight around the world, is averaging 60 miles an hour. At 8 o'clock this morning we were 420 nautical miles from New York City. The sky is partly overcast, but the weather is not bad.

Many of the passengers couldn't bring themselves to going to bed last night, but sat up through the early hours of the morning in order not to miss a single thrill.

Lady Drummond Hay, being a seasoned air traveler, was not among those who stayed up, but she was one of the first to get up this morning.

"I'm hungry," she announced when she appeared. "I got up early so I wouldn't miss breakfast."

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—Within a period of about two hours this morning, the Graf Zeppelin was sighted over the Atlantic by four steamships, the Commercial Trader, the President Roosevelt, the Rochambeau and the Tomalba. The steamers reported sighting the dirigible in radio messages to shore. At the beginning of this afternoon the Zeppelin was 750 miles out at sea.

—By JOHN HARKINS.

NAVAL AIR STATION, LAKEHURST, N. J., Aug. 8.—The Graf Zeppelin, giant of the air, began the epochal Hearst-Zeppelin Round-the-World Flight at 12:41 a. m. (Eastern daylight time), today.

In the deep darkness of the hour just before midnight, the huge ship was trundled from the big naval hangar and with only a moment's delay she was turned on the field, rose steeply in the air, Commander Hugo Eckener, at the control wheels in the forward cabin of the airship, took a course slightly east of north, directly toward New York and the Statue of Liberty, and in a few minutes the ship was lost in darkness, out of sight and sound.

On board the Graf Zeppelin as she started the first lap of her voyage that will circle the earth, were 22 passengers; a crew of 40; "Happy," a Boston terrier, and a baby alligator. All except seven of the passengers will debark at Friedrichshafen, Germany, home port of the Zeppelin.

Commander Eckener's last words before the Hearst-Zeppelin-round-the-world-flight began, promised a pleasant, easy voyage for those who are riding now on the first lap of this historic flight.

Good Weather Forecast

The weather forecast at midnight showed excellent flying weather from New York to the Grand Banks. From the Grand Banks to mid-Atlantic was a promise of from "average to better than average" weather. From there on to the coast of Ireland the forecast was somewhat indefinite, but there was no hint of storm.

And with such an auspicious start, the good Dr. Eckener declared his hope of reaching the coast of Ireland in between 45 and 50 hours.

The takeoff was spectacular chiefly for the precision and despatch with which it was accomplished. Indeed, so smoothly were orders made and obeyed; so easily did things run, that the only things that distinguished this departure from an everyday occurance were the ceremonies which accompanied the start.

For a brief few moments in the navy hangar, just before the ship began to move, a simple but impressive rite was held. United States Attorney Charles H. Tuttle, of New York, and Mrs. William Randolph Hearst spoke a few words to the throng that had assembled at the west door of the hangar, near the passengers' cabin on the Zeppelin.

Flight to Make History

Mrs. Hearst expressed the thought of everyone within her hearing when she said simply:

"This flight will make history. Tonight you are embarking on an historic venture, the accomplishment of which means so much to mankind. The entire world wishes you good luck, and godspeed."

In another moment the first movement toward the flight around the world began.

At exactly 12:18 a. m. an officer leaned out of the aft cabin of the ship and cried:

"Ready, aft."

Mauretania Beats Own Mark 4 Hours

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—(A.P.)—The Cunard liner Mauretania passed Ambrose lightship at 10:36 a. m. (Eastern daylight time) today, completing the crossing from Cherbourg in 4 days, 22 hours and 44 minutes. The time was 3 hours and 50 minuets better than her own record, but 5 hours and 2 minutes behind the time of the champion North German Lloyd liner Bremen.

Dawes in Dublin For Horse Show

DUBLIN, Ireland, Aug. 8.—(AP.)—Ambassador Charles G. Dawes, with his wife and daughter, and accompanied by Prof. Timothy A. Smiddy, Free State high commissioner in London, arrived here today to attend the Dublin horse show. They were welcomed by President Cosgrave of the Irish Free State.

Cathedral of Learning at 34th Story; Going to 40

The Cathedral of Learning will halt at 40 stories, 12 less than the original conception, and eight more than the plans agreed upon when the structure began.

This was learned today from officials of the University of Pittsburgh and John Weber, general engineer in charge of the structure.

With the structural steel now up to the thirty-fourth story, the remaining six stories will be framed September 15, if the present schedule is maintained. The concrete reinforced roofs will be on in October.

Shipments of Indiana limestone for the side walls will begin early in September and during the winter when weather permits the walls will go up.

Thus is settled definitely, according to the chief engineer, the structural mystery that has surrounded the Cathedral of Learning since, three years ago, the very announcement of the 52-story university stirred college circles the world over.

When the first formulation of ideas on the project reached crystallization, Dr. John G. Bowman, chancellor of the university; Secretary of the Treasury Andrew W. Mellon, a Pitt director; R. B. Mel-

GRAF ZEPPELIN SAILS ON GLOBE-GIRDLING CRUISE

GIANT OF AIR LEAVES ON SCHEDULE

22 Passengers, 40 of Crew Given Great Sendoff at Lakehurst Near Midnight

A moment later "forward" reported ready. At 12:20 a. m. the ship began to move from the hangar. A slight crosswind, perhaps three miles an hour, caused Dr. Eckener to decide at the last minute to take his ship out of the dangar stern first. In just four minutes she was in the open air.

Two taxi cars, one under the forward control gondola and one under the aft power cabin; six trolleys, three on each side of the ship, and more than 400 sailors, marines and Boy Scouts had moved the dirigible with ease.

She floated lightly, a few feet above the turf, and only when she was being turned north, 200 yards from the hangar, was there any straining of the "spider" ropes.

For perhaps 10 minutes she paused in the field, shining a brilliant steel blue in the glare of the field beacon. Quickly the Zep's keel was balanced—she was a bit heavy in the bow at first—and then came the order:

"Up ship!"

Nose first, the Zep rose majestically into the air as willing hands gave a ready shove. Then the dirigible's five propellers began to churn the air, and the ship moved forward.

On the ground there was a cheer from 5,000 spectators who drowned a band that struggled to make itself heard in a musical send-off.

The beacon was turned off. In the air could be seen only a dull gray hulk, passengers crowding the lighted forward cabin and electric lanterns waving signals from five cabins on the sides and astern.

Fades Into Darkness

Even that much was visible only two or three minutes. The lanterns continued to flash their signals, then they disappeared, and all that broke the stilly darkness of the night was the rumble of the dirigible's motors as she soared away toward New York.

The last of the 22 passengers boarded the dirigible at midnight, and with his arrival was dissipated all the mystery that had promised to accompany the departure.

Succeeding lists of passengers, announced at irregular intervals between 5 o'clock and 10, had told of three passengers who could not ,or would not be identified. They were, for the moment, passengers of mystery.

But when the time for departure came, their identities were easily established. They proved to be Nelson Morris, of Chicago; A. H. Godfrey, of Boston, and Joachim Rickard, of Brockton, Mass. Rickard had previously been announced as a voyager, and then his name had been withdrawn.

Two to Sleep on Deck

The other two were late additions to the list, and since the Zep has room for only 12 guests, it meant that two of the passengers would have to sleep on deck with the crew. These two devotees of the open air, it was said, would be Leisler Klep, flying representative of the Hamburg-American Line, and Merriam Cooper, grandson of the late James Fennimore Cooper.

Rickard, who lost his passage only to regain it, shared the cabin of William B. Leeds, son of the tin plate fortune maker. The announcement of where Rickard would find his cabin disposed effectively of reports that Princess Xenia, of Greece, wife of Leeds, would be a last-minute traveler.

Only seven of the 22 passengers on board will travel beyond Friedrichshafen.

Among these seven will be Lady Drummond Hay, noted air traveler; Karl Von Wiegand, famous correspondent, and Capt. Sir Hubert Wilkins, Arctic and Antarctic explorer. All three will write day-by-day stories of the trip. Their stories will be published exclusively in the New York American and allied Hearst newspapers.

No Stowaways

The other four who will travel from beginning to end of the Hearst-Zeppelin round-the-world flight are Heinz Von Eschwege-Lichtberg, of Germany; William B. Leeds, Lieut. J. C. Richardson, U. S. N., and Lieut.-Com. Charles E. Rosendahl.

For these seven there was a touch of romantic voyaging just before the flight began when a sergeant of marines, stepping before a spotlight, shouted:

"All aboard for Friedrichshafen—Tokio—Los Angeles—and other points on the trip around the globe."

As a last-minute precaution against stowaways, the passengers were taken first to the welfare house. There, after a check had been made, they wre hurrid into a bus, rushed across the flying field to the hangar, and guided at once into the Graf Zeppelin's underslung cabins.

40 STORIES FOR 'CATHEDRAL'

lon and the other directors believed that a 52-story university would not only be a novelty but be practicable. With a whirlwind campaign, alumni, students and the citizenry at large contributed between $8,000,000 and $10,000,000 for its erection.

Architects and engineers surveyed and bored the site, found that a big skyscraper could be built there, and started operations.

With considerable difference of opinion among the directorate, the height of the building began to drop, reaching as low as 20 stories. Later it grew as high as 98, theoretically. The most recent announcement was that the structure would be 32 stories. A week ago that mark was reached and the steel still was rising.

But the 40-story building will differ little in general appearance from that planned in the beginning. In proportion, it has been reduced symmetrically so that unless the floors be counted, no difference can be observed, Engineer Weber explained.

BIG DROP NOTED IN RUM GRAFT

By ROBERT S. THORNBURGH.
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—Corruption in the prohibition service has been reduced by at least 90 per cent in the last two years, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Seymour Lowman declared today.

This improvement in conditions he attributed to the placing of dry officials and agents under civil service and the increase of minimum salaries from $1,860 to $2,300 annually, thus making possible a higher paid personnel.

Soon after taking charge of the prohibition machine August 1, 1927, Lowman issued a sensational statement asserting that the dry forces were honeycombed with corruption and crooks. There was a tremendous turnover in personnel. Many agents were discharged and some of them prosecuted in the federal courts for connivance with bootleggers or other corruption.

Rum Guilt Plea Mistake, View After 2 Years

In May, 1927, Edward Dunczyk, of South Sixteenth street, pleaded guilty to possession of moonshine.

Today he changed the plea in Federal Court. He said he hadn't realized what he was doing and, furthermore, didn't know the English language then.

At the suggestion of United States Attorney John D. Meyer, Judge R. M. Gibson ordered the charge dropped.

Aluminum Co. Power Plan Seen in South

CHARLOTTE, N. C., Aug. 8.—(AP.)—The Charlotte Observer today says a "new Niagara" is planned in the mountains of North Carolina and Tennessee by the Aluminum Company of America, which will spend $125,000,000 in development of hydro-electric projects. Through eight separate dams, electrical power exceeding in magnitude the energy now generated by Niagara Falls will be created.

GIRL KIDNAPED FROM AUTO

ALBANY, N. Y., Aug. 8.—(AP.)—State troopers are investigating the reported seizure last night of a young woman by two armed men from an automobile parked on the highway between Albany and Schenectady.

The girl's capture was reported by Leland Petrie, who lives near the scene of the kidnaping. He told troopers he was riding in the car with the girl when it was stopped by two men at the point of pistols. He was dragged out and thrown into a ditch, he said, and several shots were fired at him as the car speeded out of sight.

DONOHOE DEATH MYSTERY NEAR SOLUTION

Only Few More Links Needed To Complete Uniontown Case—Clues Abundant

seemed certain to thin the ranks of racketeers in Fayette county.

"HAVE STRONG CLUES"

From Maj. Lynn Adams, commander of the state police and chief in the man hunt, came this statement:

"We have clues here that are as plain as a haystack to the naked eye. We have succeeded in running down many important bits of evidence. We believe confidently that the end is in sight. The case will be solved."

This declaration followed a report from Maj. Harry Goddard, bullet expert, who examined the slugs found in Donohoe's body and compared them with test bullets fired from pistols seized by the investigators.

While this work was being done Coroner S. A. Baltz was holding an inquest in the death of former District Attorney Rosenberg, who vacated his office at a critical moment last Saturday by committing suicide.

Arthur L. Byrne, first assistant prosecutor, related that Rosenberg had said to him: "I can't stand this any longer."

Rosenberg had just left a conference with Maj. Adams, and he and Byrne were discussing the Donohoe case, Byrne testified.

The inquest shed no light on Rosenberg's specific reasons for his act. It was expected that this would be made plain at the trial of Donohoe's alleged slayers, along with other matters pertaining to bootlegging and graft in Fayette County.

PLAN TIGHT CASE

It was expected also that Maj. Adams' case would be a complete and convincing one when he turned it over to District Attorney Jacob B. Adams and Special Prosecutor Alfred E. Jones, charged with the task of ridding the county of racketeer rule and bootlegging strife.

The solution came in sight eight days after the crime was committed.

Early July 31 John Donohoe, ex-soldier, former state trooper, ousted deputy constable and defendant in a liquor conspiracy case, was found dead in his automobile on Big Frame road, in a secluded spot.

12 BULLETS IN BODY

There were 12 bullets in his body, from two and possibly three guns. His skull had been cracked, his teeth knocked out.

The auto had been turned off the road against a tree. The gasoline tank was empty. The ignition key was missing, and the emergency brake had been set, although the tree had been barked where the bumper struck.

There were fingerprints on the wheel and on the rear of the car. The prints on the rear explained the dry gasoline tank. The car had been pushed.

To the bullets and the prints two other clues soon were added. Investigators were told that Glen Allum, reputed hi-jacker, had been seen with Donohoe shortly before the computed time of the slaying.

"Big Ed" Wonsetter, convicted bootlegger, was found and disclosed Donohoe's financial connections with a leading bootlegger and a prominent merchant.

From that beginning the investigators worked up their case.

In the task under Maj. Adams were 20 men of the constabulary, each a specialist in some branch of criminology.

Maj. Adams indicated last night that he felt his staff had been equal to its job. He courteously but firmly rejected the offer of a newspaper to supply him with the services of Ora Slater, Ohio detective.

Church Marriage Now Suffices In Italy

ROME, Aug. 8.—Today throughout all Italy the new marriage rules and regulations called for by the Latern treaties between Italy and the Holy See came into force.

Wherever young couples went to the altar to be bound in matrimony they listened to the priest's explanation that now and henceforth marriage by the church is sufficient and marriage by the state is not necessary.

There was a great rush of young couples to avail themselves of the new simplified procedure, many having put off their marriage date until the new accord went into effect. Virtually every parish priest had several marriages to perform this morning, rivaling congestion in the month of June.

CONVICTS GIVEN ESCAPE TERMS

The two convicts who escaped from the Western Penitentiary in a packing case and were captured 24 hours later in Cleveland were sentenced today in Criminal Court.

"Daredevil Dick" Spangler, of Mercer County, was given two to five years for escape and larceny of the getaway auto, and "Honolulu Charlie" Bisman one to two years for breaking away.

BOTH PLEAD GUILTY

The time is to be added to their original sentences. Spangler was serving three to seven years, and Bisman five to 10.

Both pleaded guilty and Spangler in a general way told of the escape, of "Shoebox" Miller 50 years ago.

"Nobody helped us get away," he told Judge Harry H. Rowand.

HID IN CASES

On June 14 the two hid themselves in packing cases while the other convicts were at lunch. The cases were to be shipped downtown in a penitentiary truck to a freight train. When Driver Jean Bundy stopped the truck to deliver a package in Preble avenue Spangler forced open his box and sped away with the truck.

Spangler and Bisman reached Cleveland in an auto stolen in Glenshaw and made for a relative's home, which was being watched by Cleveland police.

VETS IN DISPUTE OVER BELLEAU

BOSTON, Aug. 8.—(AP.)—Yankee division veterans moved today to end the controversy over whether to their men or those of the Second (Marine) Division, A. E. F., belonged the honor of having captured Belleau, France, in the Aisne-Marne offensive of July, 1918.

The dispute was brought to light with publication of plans of the Twenty-sixth Division pilgrimage to France next September to dedicate a chapel to the division's dead at Belleau.

Almost immediately, Maj. Gen. James G. Harbord, in New York City, asserted that Belleau was "Marine territory" and protested against the location of the memorial there. In a statement issued by members of the memorial committee here, they declared the question was "too sacred to admit of rancor or controversy, however justified," and said official records proved that the Yankee Division fought at Belleau and the Marines at Belleau Woods, several miles apart.

Mother Slays Girl, Then Kills Herself

HUNTINGTON, W. Va., Aug. 8.—(AP.)—The bodies of Mrs. Burt Wilson, 36, and her daughter, Madeline, 17, were found early today in the girl's room in the Wilson home. Police expressed the belief the mother killed the daughter and herself with a pistol found in the room. Mrs. Wilson had been suffering from a nervous attack for some time, police were told. The girl graduated from high school last June.

Woman and Niece Held for Court

Mrs. Mary Jamos, 43, of 5431/2 Evans street, McKeesport, and her niece, Bessie Ostrander, 22, are being held for court to answer charges of receiving stolen goods and for stealing as the result of a hearing before Magistrate E. M. Trich. The girl was charged with stealing property from the McKeesport Hospital. Joseph Flickstine, 23, son of Mrs. Jamos, was discharged.

5,200 Convictions in Year, With Sentences of 11,000 Years, Reveal Big Increase

By KENNETH CLARK.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—How extensively the dope evil has spread over the country is strikingly revealed in the announcement by the Federal narcotics division that 5,200 persons were convicted during the 1929 fiscal year for violating the drug laws.

This far exceeds all previous records.

The aggregate sentences imposed on the narcotic offenders totaled more than 11,000 years, indicating a tendency on the part of courts to deal more harshly with this type of criminal, the announcement yesterday stated. Convictions obtained represented 97.6 per cent of the total number of cases brought by government agents.

These facts are contained in a report the government is preparing for the League of Nations. Under a previous agreement, America submits to Geneva an annual statement on the narcotic situation.

In announcing yesterday he would ask Congress for $5,000,000 to enlarge existing prison facilities to prevent further riots, President Hoover declared that 33 per cent of the Federal prison population were narcotic violators. The figures released by the narcotics bureau show that dope criminals are increasing at such an alarming rate they will constitute, if the present ratio continues, nearly one-half of the total prisoners before additional accommodations can be provided to segregate them.

squabble. Pangallo is declared to have been a marked man since 1927, when the first of three attempts was made on his life. A bomb was exploded in his automobile while he was driving in Wylie avenue September 19, 1927. The second attempt was made in Fifth avenue, near Stevenson street, May 21, 1928, when Pangallo was shot four times. The third attempt was made in Mt. Washington last January 23. A curtained car drew up beside Pangallo's and a volley of shots was poured into his machine.

HAS ALIBI

Pangallo told Lieut. Corbett that at the time of the murder he was sitting on the front porch of his home and that neighbors can verify his alibi. He stated further that since two years ago, when the Monastero brothers and himself had slight differences, he has not seen or spoken to them.

Corbett revealed that four other suspects have fled the city, but he hinted that he still held "an ace in the hole."

Sleuths reported that Pangello has a police record. In May, 1927, he was arrested on a charge of carrying concealed weapons, and a year later was taken for a felonious shooting, the records show.

South Side Boy Victim of Dog

Alexander Frullain, 13, of 1321 Sarah street, was bitten on the back by a dog said by police to be owned by Mrs. Rosia Severnetski, of 1012 Carson street. The boy was treated at South Side Hospital. The owner was notified to keep the animal tied up.

Downtown Rubbish Fire Causes Scare

A small rubbish blaze sent great volumes of smoke curling over the downtown district early today and created false impressions of a serious fire. The rubbish pile was located on a vacant lot in the rear of the William Penn garage in Webster, near Sixth, avenue.

Lucky Bucks—New Money for Old

By LUCKY BUCK.

Folks, Lee Shelton, 7735 Susquehanna street, isn't kicking about his luck at all, at all. In fact, he pats himself on the back and grins a toothsome grin of glee and pleasure.

He sprints into the Sun-Telegraph domain yesterday morning and announces to the world that he has Lucky Buck No. N76790631D and he wants jack in return. Does he get it? He does.

Shelton left my headquarters with rapidly growing ideas of a night of revelry. He didn't offer to split with me, either.

And H. B. Negley, 5654 Penn avenue, crashed through with one yesterday. Thinks he found it in an East Liberty restaurant, and it may be so, but I left that bill—No. X46938167D—in a little store on a back street of Braddock.

R. J. M. Jones, a clerk for the Pennsylvania railroad, received Fortunate Simoleon No. Z63338403D in a lunch room on Liberty avenue.

And an East Liberty restaurant was an unintentional host to Miss Josephine Regan Tuesday evening, giving her Benevolent Bean No. A22729102E in change. When she arrived home, Miss Regan, a conscientious young lady, began her nightly duty of checking over my hotsy-totsies. What I can't understand is why she is going to look for more. I should think she'd give someone else a break!

And a Mr. McClaren, of Homestead, handed Joseph Averbach, 538 Ninth avenue, Homestead, a Lucky Buck in exchange for some films he had developed. Averbach collected a sawbuck for Lucky Buck No. T67367377D, yesterday.

To further my downfall, Miss Katherine Hack, 133 Roosevelt road, is employed in the Latshaw Pharmacy in Emsworth, where I left a smacker Monday. A customer walks in and informs her of the fact; she digs and digs, and finally unearths Lucky Buck No. Z50298583D. Question: Does that qualify her for the gold-diggers' union?

J. B. Swann, proprietor of the Ohio Street Garage, caught No. X18520275D on the wing. He goes to Atlantic City to recover from the shock.

Today, I visited Canonsburg, West End, Elliott, Millvale and Westview. That's why I was out when another winner, Mrs. Scully Watkins, Clairton, brought in No. Z78107079D, and wanted to take me out to lunch. She said Mr. Watkins wouldn't mind!

Here're today's new ones: The Lincoln Pharmacy, 228 Fourth avenue, Millvale, Ebert's Novelty Shop, Chartiers and Lorenz street, Elliott, the West View Buick Company, the Parrott Tea Room, 32 West Pike street, Canonsburg, and the barber shop on Main street, West End. Better watch their swag or they will miss things; they expire August 17:

Eckener Hopes Flight Will Profit World; Thanks Americans

LAKEHURST, N. J., Aug. 8.—(INS.)—Following is text of letter made public by Dr. Hugo Eckener, commander of the Graf Zeppelin, just before the giant airship sailed on the first leg of the Hearst-Zeppelin Round-the-World Flight:

To the American Public:

I cannot express to the people of the United States the great feeling of gratitude I have for the remarkable encouragement and inspiration that I have received during my effort to accomplish something new.

It is my sincere hope that the Hearst-Zeppelin World Flight will be a great contribution toward the welfare of the world in general. It is my earnest desire that humanity profit through these efforts. That is why the extreme kindness of your good friends in the United States means so much to me in this supreme effort.

From the letters and telegrams I received I know there is a tremendous and widespread interest in the flight we are about to start around the world.

Those who wish to keep in touch with the daily affairs of the Zeppelin and her adventures will be able to do so through an arrangement I have made with a large chain of American newspapers—the Hearst newspapers—which are published in various cities from coast to coast.

Under this arrangement the news dispatches and special feature dispatches from the Zeppelin will go direct and exclusively to the New York American in New York City and the allied Hearst newspapers throughout the country.

On each day of the trip I will be thinking of my friends in the United States.

Sincerely,
HUGO ECKENER.

Rumania Discovers Plot To Put Carol on Throne

BUCHAREST, Rumania, Aug. 8.—(AP.)—A great sensation has been created in Bucharest by the discovery of an alleged scheme for the reinstatement of former Crown Prince Carol of Rumania, who is now in exile in France.

This morning the police summoned M. Ostinescu, chief of Premier Maniu's political cabinet in the foreign office, and M. Saich, a senator of the Government party, to answer a charge of attempting to procure a passport for M. Barbujonescu, an intimate friends of former Prince Carol. Barbujonescu, it was believed, desired to return to Bucharest from a self-imposed exile in London for the purpose of perfecting a plot to reinstate Carol.

Another minor official in the foreign office was arrested in the same connection.

WICKERSHAM WILL HEAD QUIZ

Dry Laws Only Single Group To Receive Concentrated Study; Duties Assigned

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—(AP.)—Prohibition has been assigned a place by itself in a program of 11 investigations worked out by the national law enforcement commission after four months of preliminary study of its general problem.

No other single body of laws was singled out for such concentrated study, and the commission further indicated the importance it attaches to prohibition by designating its own chairman, George W. Wickersham, as head of the committee which will conduct this investigation.

OTHER INQUIRIES

Each of the 11 lines of investigation mapped out will be pursued under the direction of a similar committee, with Chairman Wickersham as an ex-officio member of all. Besides prohibition, they will deal with causes of crime; statistics of crime and criminal justice; police prosecutions; courts; penal institutions, probation and parole; juvenile delinquency; criminal justice and the foreign born; lawlessness by government law enforcing officers, and the cost of crime.

Judge William S. Kenyon, of Iowa, was designated chairman of the committee on lawlessness by government law enforcing officers, which was made one of the subjects of special inquiry because of the recent use of firearms by prohibition agents in cases which aroused considerable criticism in and out of Congress.

CHAIRMEN NAMED

The committee on juvenile delinquency will be headed by Miss Ada L. Comstock, president of Radcliffe College, the only woman on the commission; that on causes of crime, by Henry W. Anderson, of Virginia; statistics of crime and criminal justice, by Dean Roscoe Pound, of Harvard Law School; police, by Frank J. Loesch, of Chicago; courts, by Judge William I. Grubb, of Alabama; prosecutions, by Monte M. Lemann, of New Orleans; penal institutions, by Judge Kenneth Macintosh, of Washington State; criminal justice, by Newton D. Baker, of Ohio, and cost of crime, by Judge Paul J. McCormick, of California.

SCION OF PENN SCOUT GUIDE

Eagle Scout Clark B. Johnston, of Crafton, who has received many honors as an ideal Scout, is reporting details of the International jamboree at Birkenhead, England, for the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph. His cabled news reports are being published exclusively in the Sun-Telegraph.

By CLARK B. JOHNSTON,
Eagle Scout
Correspondent, Sun-Telegraph

BIRKENHEAD, Eng., Aug. 8.—Two hundred fifty enthusiastic Boy Scouts invaded Wales today and the pleasure was mutual. They boarded a special train, their first trip on one of the English flyers, which seem small, but have tremendous speed.

The contingent left Arrowe Park in buses for Birkenhead and were taken to Llangollen, Wales, where it was met by Reginald Penn, a direct descendant of William Penn, founder of Pennsylvania. He acted as our guide.

During the morning we saw Crows Castle, built in 600 B. C. and now one of the historic ruins of Wales. We also visited a brewery and the inns.

During the afternoon we were guests at the sheepdog trials, the annual sporting event of Wales. Tea was served in a cafe and later we had canal rides and various excursions.

Boy Scouts who are interested—and all of the thousands in Western Pennsylvania are interested—in this biggest event in the history of Scoutdom will find exclusively in the Sun-Telegraph news written for them by one of their own Scouts. Scout Johnston will feature the news which he as a Scout knows will be of special interest to Scouts here. Watch the Sun-Telegraph for his articles.

Vigilant Guards Capture Latest Zep 'Stowaway'

LAKEHURST, N. J., Aug. 8.—Another prospective entrant to the list of aerial stowaways, rapidly becoming the most unpopular fraternity in the world, is in the Navy brig here awaiting the action of authorities.

He is Morris Roth, 18, of Trenton, stalwart blacksmith's son.

The decidedly unpleasant fate of the German stowaway, Albert Buschko meant little or nothing to Morris. Except for the vigilance of the guards who captured him in the hangar last night he was in a fair way to emulate his American predecessor, the now forgotten "Red" Terhune of St. Louis.

He was found on the catwalk, high up on the inside of the hangar. He had brought with him a rope, which he said, he intended to tie to a rafter, lowering himself to the dirigible as she was being walked out.

In the excitement over the finding of Roth, it was at first believed that a second hopeful stowaway also was in the hangar. Either this youngster was frightened away by the hue and cry raised in the capture of Roth, or he did not exist. No one else was found.

Roth said he had hitch-hiked from Trenton early this morning. He ascended to the cat walk, he said, by the elevator, and hid himself in a dark corner. He said he wanted to go to Germany to visit his uncle's mother, who is ill in Hamburg.

What will happen to him tomorrow, is not known. He seemed to be a little glum, but otherwise took his capture calmly enough.

World Flight Clothes Problem for Lady Hay

By LADY GRACE DRUMMOND HAY.

Only woman who will make the Hearst-Zeppelin round world flight. Her dispatches will be printed exclusively by the Hearst newspapers.

LAKEHURST, N. J., Aug. 7.—I am ready for the Hearst-Zeppelin round-the-world flight when the Graf Zeppelin is!

Within half an hour my baggage will be stowed away in my chintz-lined cabin No. 7, the same cabin that I have had on every flight. No. 7 is almost "mine by tradition" now, and if there is not any particular rush to dispute my claim, it may be because—accustomed to much air—I asked for extra ventilation, which Knut Eckener kindly arranged for me. We English are supposed to enjoy sitting in draughts, everyone tells me, and my choice of No. 7 goes unchallenged!

Looking around the little room where I will spend three weeks or more of eventful days and nights, I cannot help feeling a little emotion. The first trans-Atlantic flight of the Graf Zeppelin last October comes back in all its vividness. Memories of the first trial flights in Europe before we made the great 6,300-mile trip, memories of the recent Mediterranean flight over Palestine and Egyptian waters when I shared lucky seven with Countess Brandenstein-Zeppelin, daughter of the late Count Zeppelin, inventor of this type of aircraft. She did not like Knut's patent system of ventilation, so we compromised and stuffed half of it up! And now I am back again, sole occupant of the cabin as the only woman to make the round-the-world flight.

Black Cat Goes

Sole occupant did I say?—Not quite! It would never do to leave out of the reckoning my faithful mascot, the black velvet cat with the flue-brush tail, who surveys the scene with glassy green eyes. He knows the cabin well, and has been on every trip with me all over the world for 10 long years of constant travel, and whatever he may think of his tumultuous life, remains as discreetly inarticulate as Susi, the gorilla, did, after her exciting experience.

What a day it has been! No conjuror could have succeeded better than I did, in coaxing a multitude of "necessities" into the minimum of space—and weight. We are limited to weight again, of course, and once more the allowance seems uncomfortably small. Even if it is somewhere around 50 pounds, and even if frocks and flimsies weigh no more than a sigh, there are countless other objects to be taken into consideration. Shoes, for instance, typewriting paper, cameras, films—evening cloak, leather coat, warm clothes—the list is interminable. You see, we will fly, not only around the world, but around the seasons as well. It is likely to be warm between New York and Friedrichshafen; just as likely to be icy-cold between Friedrichshafen and Tokio now that it is planned to take the extreme northern route almost within the Arctic Circle.

Tokio, where we will probably stay three or four days, may be grilling hot and sun-baked. From Tokio to Los Angeles across the Pacific Ocean flying in a northerly direction will undoubtedly be misty, if not very foggy, damp, cold and raw, and you in America know the climate of Los Angeles this time of year better than I do. Any woman can in imagination understand and share the problem which confronted me this morning, as I stood before my big steamer trunks, wondering what on earth to take, what to leave, and how to get it all in, anyhow. The flying part is simple compared with what I will need at the landing points. There are sure to be parties and receptions, afternoon and evening, in varying climates.

Two Evening Frocks

I thought that two evenng frocks would be enough, one white, with a close-fitting lace bodice and fluffy tulle skirt; the other a "greige" that is a grey-beige, lace dress. The one pair of silver shoes will do for both dresses. A black dinner or afternoon dress with frilled skirt long at the back, and black shoes. I bought a lovely big lace hat on Fifth avenue to go with it, but that refuses to be packed!

So I carried it in my hand. And tried to manage that Dr. Eckner at least did not see me with such a diaphanous frivolity.

Then I have two chiffon summer dresses along, one all frills, the copy of a model which made a great sensation on one of our most beautiful actresses in London; the other I bought in New York, and with it a little chiffon "cocktail" jacket to supply sleeves in case I thought sleeves would look better. The lace hat will go with these two dresses as well, and neither of them are crushable in packing.

For the mornings of the hotter days, I have a couple of white pleated skirts and jumpers, a white and green knitted three-piece for cooler days, and all of these can be "topped" by one of the silk knitted turbans I have brought with me which pack so easily into a suitcase. I have them in white, cherry and yellow with accessories to match. Four handbags I felt were absolutely necessary. The brown leather one with which I travel, a rhinestone evening bag, a dainty day bag of Chinese embroidery, and a black suede one with very lovely marquisette and onyx frame which I got in that mecca of handbags, Vienna. Stockings galore, but they weigh nothing. Two or three "foldable" felt hats for more formal wear, light lingerie, a Japanese Delaine kimono in dark colors which I brought with me from Japan a few weeks ago, and one very lovely one in black silk painted with delicate pastel colors.

Will Keep Watch

I need this one for the occasions when I may have to get up in the middle of the night to "take my watch" or to look at some night views from the windows of the passenger saloon. On this flight, Karl Von Wiegand, Sir Hubert Wilkins and myself are going to take turns at "keeping watch" just like the officers will be doing in the control cabin, or as marine officers do on ships. There will be so much to see, so much to write about every minute of this wonderful expedition, that we do not want to lose a single mile of it. So we are taking it in turns to be "on duty" in order that you who are following our trip in the Hearst newspapers, may not miss a scrap of all that is happening. I thought that this beautiful black silk kimono, warmly lined, would be just the thing for such "watches." It is warm, all enveloping and does not suggest the "negligee" too much.

Having been told that the Friedrichshafen-Tokio run may be so very cold, I put a couple of pairs of woolen stockings in the handbag, warm gloves, my leather coat with striped fur collar and flying helmet.

Nothing like keeping one's ears warm at an altitude of several thousand feet, possibly over Arctic ice fields. In Friedrichshafen, I am going to buy a real old-fashioned woolen shawl, such as the German peasant women wear, to snuggle my nose into at night. I don't believe I could find one in the whole of New York, even if I had tried. We are taking sleeping bags and lined boots, so that was warning enough for me about possible weather conditions in that part of the world. I really do not think I have any other clothes along. These are plenty, too many, if the truth be told, but what else could I do with all these changing weather conditions ahead? There are two nice-sized cupboards in my cabin to hang my things up in; two rather narrow little shelves above them; a rack on the wall; a table by the window and that is all. I cannot unpack much, of course.

The dresses can hang up, but some even now look sadly in need of an iron. That does not matter, for even if I cannot have a warm iron on the Zeppelin—good thought—it never occurred to me before—why don't we have irons aboard, they are just as electric as the cookers? I must mention that to Captain Von Schiller. My toilet things I leave in the bag, as there is no place to put them, and one cannot encumber the washing places up with face cream, lotions and perfumes.

Hot, Cold Water

Just imagine what my rugged companions would feel even if they did not say anything. One blessing is that we have both hot and cold running water on the Zeppelin. There are two washrooms at the very end of the cabin corridor. One is marked ladies, and one for men, but as I am the only woman on board, I do not claim the monopoly of the washroom except when I am inside it. On the trans-Atlantic flight in October, the circumstances were exactly similar.

I used to get up very early, about 5, go and wash, then return to my cabin to put the "finishing touches" to my toilet, and leave the precious basin and taps to my fellow passengers—19 of them; that's what I'll do tomorrow morning. It is never any hardship getting up early on the Zeppelin. In fact, life aboard is not the usual procession of nights and days, but of new scenes, unprecedented events and things that can only happen on a great experiment such as the Zeppelin trans-ocean flights still are. One goes to bed anytime, get up just as often as something wakes you.

It may be the heavy step of Dr. Eckener threading down the frail passage; then we all want to hear the latest news of position and direction. It may be a change of speed which one feels from the altered vibrations of the engines, or the echo log in fog, but most often it is the sudden burst into activity of Karl Von Wiegand's typewriter, our journalistic "chief of staff," as he bangs out some nocturnal bulletin in the vain, but encouraging hope, that it will be in time for the morning paper.

Of course there are no baths on the Zeppelin, but who cares. On the Mediterranean flight at Easter it was so cold that on several nights I did not undress at all, and this time we are to fly over the white Arctic lands where the Esquimaux never, never wash. But how wonderful, how inexpressibly glorious is the bath when we come down to earth again—it really is a joy more than worth the temporary privation. I am eager to see what kind of food we will get on this trip, for such marvels have been promised by Sherry's of New York, who are doing all the catering for the world flight. That I will not be able to tell you until tomorrow after breakfast.

Eager to Start

Now that the flight is near, that everything is prepared, people waiting, talking about it, I myself am more than just "thrilled" or "excited." Like most people, I suppose, I never can express my deepest emotions, only the surface ones. So with this trip. I am profoundly emotioned and immensely eager for the start. There is nothing more to do in my cabin—I have arranged it as it will stay for the flight to Friedrichshafen. I have made the acquaintance of the passengers; did not know before, they are all talking with their friends, there is an army of my colleagues in journalism around the airship "dock" just waiting for us to show signs of departure.

I feel like a regular veteran of the skies, and try to "sniff" the weather, like I have seen Dr. Eckener do, but at this moment of my apprenticeship all breezes smell alike to me. I began to wish that I could have brought with me all the mascots which were given to me for the flight. I could not bring the live kitten after all as much as I wanted to. It was too young, only four weeks old. I had it in my apartment in the Warwick Hotel, New York, ever since Miss Florence Perlman brought it to me, loving it more and more each day for its sweet playfulness, and it is just that playfulness which made me decide to leave it behind with the pet loving family of Mr. William D. Engel, of the Warwick Hotel, who will feed it on proper kitten food and play with it the games that kittens' hearts love.

If it came with me in the Zep, I would have to keep the poor little mite in a box covered with wire netting, and really I don't know whether I could get the proper food for it. Certainly it would not be allowed to run about and play, and every one would be on the nervous alert lest they hurt it accidentally. That would never do on a serious expedition like the world flight.

So "Little Lady" as the kitty is called, will stay behind in New York, and grow into a big cat while I am away. While Velvet, the ten-year-old veteran mascot will make the voyage by proxy.

SNOOK, ON STAND, DESCRIBES HOW HE KILLED CO-ED

DOCTOR CLOSE TO COLLAPSE IN RECITAL

State University professor had told, with simple directness, all that had gone before. How he and Theora had been motoring; their various conversations; their quarrel after he parked the car on the range because he said he was going away over the week-end to a family reunion at Lebanon, O., his mother's home.

Suddenly she seized him. They scuffled.

DIFFICULT TO TESTIFY

Snook paused. He could not go on. He bowed his head. His frame shook. He removed his glasses and wiped his eyes with his handkerchief. The jury waited.

"I hit her," Snook finally blurted out. "I hit her with the hammer that had been lying on the window ledge of the machine.

"She fought back. I struck her again. She was reaching for her purse, in which she sometimes carried a pistol. We struggled and I hit her again.

"She slid out of the car. I followed her out and as she came toward me I hit her again.

"She fell, her head striking the running board. She did not rise.

"I was crying and in great pain when I first struck her. I cannot remember hitting her more than four blows."

The witness paused. He seemed to be struggling to pull himself together.

Snook was able to proceed after another wait of a minute or two.

He said he had no recollection of what took place between the time he struck the third or fourth blow and when he found himself on the running board.

His intention in striking her with the hammer, he said, was to "Stop her, if at all possible."

FIRST BLOW NOT HARD

The first blow in the machine, he said "wasn't very hard." The second blow, he declared, was struck while she was getting out of the machine.

"I couldn't hit her hard," he said.

"The third blow," he said, was to "stop her."

Snook said the idea in the back of his head while all this was going on was that she "was going to shoot me; she was reaching for the purse which I thought held her pistol."

"She had threatened me before, but I was never afraid when I could see the purse," he declared. "I had talked her out of it before.

"I certainly believe my life was in danger."

Spectators, most of them women and girls, shuddered as Snook said he spoke to the girl and got no reply.

Snook then related how he left the body of the co-ed lying in the blood-stained grass, got in his machine and drove away.

Snook was shown a penknife, one of the state's exhibits. Miss Hix's throat had been slashed. The state contends this slashing of the jugular vein caused death. Snook said he carried the penknife, "or one like it."

The knife was lying on the floor of the automobile as he was driving home after he had slain Theora, he testified.

He said he did not know if he used the knife in severing the girl's jugular vein.

"COULDN'T READ"

Arriving home after the murder, he said he parked the car in the garage, went into the kitchen and started to read.

Mrs. Snook, he said, came down stairs about 10:30 p. m. They had no conversation, although she "may have just said a word."

He said he couldn't read because "things didn't look right—I can't explain it, but I just couldn't read."

He identified the dress Miss Hix wore, but said he did not know how the blood stains got on the garment.

Shown the bloody undergarment the girl wore, he said he could not identify it.

He identified the cap which, he said, was in the machine when they drove to the range. He also identified the hammer and knife.

DESCRIBES QUARREL

In detailing the quarrel that preceded the killing, Snook said Miss Hix declared:

"You are not going away over the week-end."

He replied that he was, that he had to go to visit his mother; that he promised her he would.

"Damn your mother!" Miss Hix cried, according to Snook. "I'll kill her and then you won't have to go to see her."

"But I have arranged to take Mrs. Snook and the baby there," Snook stated he replied.

Then, he said, Miss Hix became infuriated and shouted:

"Damn your wife; I'll kill her, too, and get her out of the way."

GIRL 'PHONED HIM

Step by step, Snook led up to the description of the crime. On the night of June 13, he met Miss Hix at about 8 o'clock. She had telephoned him about 4:30 p. m., making the appointment.

She asked him if he wanted to go to their apartment and he replied he was not particularly desirous of doing so. So she said "Let's go for a drive." They did, motoring out to the outskirts of the city. He did the driving.

GAVE HIM SANDWICH

En route she handed him a sandwich, saying she thought he would enjoy it as he must be hungry. She told him she had eaten.

"I ate the sandwich," Snook testified, "but I didn't like the crust and told her so."

The defense contends the sandwich was drugged with an emotional excitant.

Miss Hix had taken her purse along, Snook said in answer to a question. They drove over various roads.

"Take me some place where I can scream," Snook said Theora told him.

Previously Snook had testified Miss Hix had been nervous and irritable for weeks.

They stopped at one place on the road. She seemed different. She put her arms around him and said: "Are you feeling better?" She put her arm around his shoulder, he said. But she didn't like the place so asked him to drive somewhere else. He drove her to the lonely rifle range, outside the city, arriving there "about 10 minutes after 9." He parked the car about 30 yards from the road when he drove in.

He turned off the lights of the machine. They sat there for a while. And then they quarreled.

The slain campus beauty for weeks before her death became a "tiger woman" in her attitude toward him, Dr. Snook declared.

TELLS OF SLAPPING

Snook told the jury Miss Hix nagged him, slapped him, cursed him, threatened to tell his wife of their cladestine love affair and even declared she would shoot him. He was as self-contained on the stand, as he sat there with legs crossed and apparently relaxed, as if he were propounding a theory to a classroom of students.

"Nothing I did suited her toward the end," he exclaimed, almost petulantly. "She thought I wasn't making enough of a fuss over her."

"TWO-MAN WOMAN"

Snook portrayed the supposedly quiet, retiring co-ed as "a two-man woman." He related in detail her secret love affair not only with himself but with Marion T. Meyers, another former Ohio State University professor. He branded Theora as an "experimenter with drugs," not only on herself but on him. He spared the dead girl's character not a whit in his remarkable recital to the jury in the presence of a thronged courtroom of spectators.

CO-ED CHANGES

Miss Hix, once so sweet and trusting, became mighty hard to handle after their "affair" had run a course of three years, Snook revealed. She wasn't the same girl he had set up in an apartment when they were madly infatuated with each other. Frequently they had quarrels in the apartment, and while they were out motoring. Several times she refused to get out of his car when he was about to start on a trip alone, and "dared" him to throw her out.

She had got to the stage where she was taking drugs of an aphrodisiac nature and she was administering them to him, he related. He said she carried a little bottle containing tablets in her purse. On two occasions he had observed her taking cocaine, once by injection.

The co-ed became cross and irritable for some unexplained reason and developed a desire to hurt him and to scratch him. Often in their apartment she assaulted him. Later she would deny she had done this. Finally, he used to jot down in a notebook these occurrences and when she returned to a normal frame of mind he would tell her about the "altercations" and just how she had mistreated him.

Snook told the jury he really believed she might shoot him. He had once given her a pistol "for protection" and even instructed her how to shoot. He himself was for years the world's champion rapid-fire pistol shot. Many times, when they went riding, she carried the pistol in her black purse.

DENIES JEALOUSY

Her "affair" with Meyers, an instructor in farm crops at the university, apparently did not make Snook jealous, the defendant testified.

Snook related unprintable details of Theora's drab romance with Meyers and with himself. It was a sorry story as it came from the lips of this man on trial for his life.

Adult Registration In Schools Gains

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—(AP.)—There is revenge if not alleviation for the kids in this. The federal bureau of education finds adult registration in schools has increased 30 per cent in past year.

BOARD TO LET COAL AWARDS

The regular meeting of the Elizabeth Township School board on account of the township auditors working on the records, which they expected to complete this week, has been postponed until next Tuesday evening.

In addition to receiving the audit report at the meeting next week the board will open bids for wiring and installation of electric fixtures in the Smithdale school house, for medical inspection of approximately 1800 pupils in the various schools in the township during the 1929-30 term and for furnishing of coal delivered required to the several schools. Schools are located at Boston, Greenock, Buena Vista, Blythedale, Industry, Smithdale and Wylie.

WORKMAN DIES IN STONE MIXER

A man was ground to death in a stone-crushing machine at Preble avenue and Westhall street, Woods Run, today.

George Nozen, 60, employe of James Jiles & Co., was feeding the machine when his shovel caught in the steel teeth. He was pulled toward the crusher, police reported, and drawn into the mechanism when his clothing caught.

Nozen's employers said he roomed in Adams street.

Weather Conditions.

Showers were quite general in North Carolina and Tennessee and scattered over the Gulf states and the Plains states. The temperature changes were slight, but the tendency is towards rising. The principal high pressure area covers the northeastern portion of the country, while low pressure areas are developing over the West. A center over Northern Alberta looks favorable for showers over the Canadian Northwest and the Border states.

River Conditions.

The rivers are stationary at low stages. Stage at Franklin is 0.4 foot; Lock No. 7, 10.4; Pittsburgh, 10.0; Dam No. 2, 8.5; Dam No. 6, 7.6; Dam No. 9, 8.1; Dam No. 12, 3.3. The dams are up.

NAVY TO DROP DEWEY'S SHIP

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—(AP.)—The likelihood that many of the 19 second line cruisers still on the Navy's warship rolls will be scrapped was considered by Navy Department officials to be heralded by the recommended removal from the Navy list of the historic Olympia, flagship of Admiral Dewey at the battle of Manila Bay.

These cruisers, of which only six remain in commission or active service, are all over 20 years old, and have not figured to any extent in the naval limitation discussions. The other vessels of this class have been decommissioned, but still are carried on the Navy's rolls.

The Sun-Telegraph Fifteen Cent Pattern

A POPULAR PRACTICAL MORNING FROCK, WITH REVERSIBLE CLOSING.

Figured percale and chambrey are combined in this serviceable model. Crepe, gingham, dainty printed lawn and sateen are also suggested. The fronts are lapped at diagonal lines, and may be closed from right to left or left to right. The belt ends slip through openings in the fronts and fasten at the center of the back. The frock may be finished with a wrist length sleeve in bishop style or with a short sleeve as shown in the large view.

The pattern is cut in four sizes: Small, 34-36; medium, 38-40; large, 42-44, and extra large, 46-48 inches bust measure. To make the frock for a medium size with long sleeves will require 4⅝ yards of material 35 inches wide. With short sleeves 4⅝ yards will be required. For collar, cuffs, belt and pockets of contrasting material ½ yard will be required, cut crosswise. To finish with binding as pictured in the large view will require 7¼ yards 1½ inch wide. The width of the lower edge of the frock is 1¾ yard.

COUPON.

This pattern will be sent on receipt of 15 cents (silver or 2c and 1c stamps). Make number, name, address, etc., plain. Send to Pattern Department, The Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, Pittsburgh, Pa.

PRISON REFORM ADVOCATED

YOUNGSTOWN, O., Aug. 8. — Many prisons in the country are overcrowded and unfit for human beings, Congressman John G. Cooper, of Youngstown, chairman of the Congressional Prison Investigating Committee, declared here.

"No warden can maintain discipline in four federal penal institutions under present conditions," Cooper declared. "Unless the administration acts quickly, we will face a serious situation."

Congressman Cooper declared steps necessary to remedy conditions in federal penal institutions which resulted in outbreaks such as occurred at Leavenworth, Dannemora and Auburn include: Building of two new federal prisons, one in the North Central and another in the Southwestern district; erection of two narcotic farms for the large number of "dope" addicts now in federal penitentiaries; creation of parole boards in each federal judicial district; erection of at least one federal jail for short-term prisoners; a hospital for the criminal insane, and a juvenile institution.

Fail to Identify Victim of Train

NEW CASTLE, Pa., Aug. 8.—Efforts to identify the man killed by a Pennsylvania freight train near the New Castle Paper Mills have so far failed. In his clothing was found a salary receipt for $17 dated July 31 and bearing the signature of "George Burns."

"KONJOLA LOST NO TIME ABOUT HELPING ME!"

Pittsburgh Resident Still Marveling at the Speed With Which New Medicine Works.

Many marvel at the speed with which the 32 ingredients of Konjola—22 of them the juices of roots and herbs of known medicinal worth—bring about results, even in the obstinate cases that have, year after year, hung on with the tenacity of a bulldog, defying every effort for relief.

MR. THOMAS WILLIAMS

Others, who have put this master medicine to the test, marvel at the thoroughness with which Konjola clears up the ills of the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels, and gives relief from rheumatism, neuritis and nervousness. Konjola is a medicine not designed to give mere temporary relief; its goal is far beyond that. Profit by the experience of a fellow-townsman, Mr. Thomas Williams, 1233 Buena Vista street, this city. Read what he said a few days ago to the Konjola Man, who is at the Dow Drug Store (formerly McCulloch's), Penn avenue and Sixth street, Pittsburgh, where daily he is answering questions about this amazing medicine and its triumphs. Meet the Konjola Man. Get the facts, then you will understand better the enthusiasm of Mr. Williams, who says:

"Konjola certainly lost no time about helping me, and just four bottles of this astonishing medicine did for me what all else I tried did not even start to do. My stomach had been out of order for years, and every day and night meant misery to me. I tried the strictest of diets, and that did not help. I ate only the plainest and simplest of foods, but after every meal came the gas, bloating and heart palpitation. At night I was so miserable that I got little sleep. No wonder I lost weight and vitality. I was tired all the time, and suffered almost constantly from bilious spells.

"When I heard about Konjola I was not greatly interested, for after my long and unhappy experiences I had just about given up faith in any treatment. But the indorsements of Konjola were so sincere that finally I made up my mind to see what this new medicine would do for me. The result was a big surprise and a happy one. The first bottle showed me I was on the right track, and thereafter my improvement was rapid. My appetite returned slowly but surely, and my stomach became stronger. I began to sleep better, and in just a month I knew again what it was to be feeling fit and eating and sleeping and working like a well man should. I take off my hat to Konjola; it is certainly the master medicine of them all."

Powerful though Konjola is in the stubborn cases, it may be given to the infant. It is a medicine for young and old; for all the family. Konjola is not backed by promises and claims; it stands only on a foundation of deeds; of triumphs.

The Konjola Man is at the Dow Drug Store (formerly McCulloch's), Penn avenue and Sixth street, Pittsburgh, where daily he is meeting the public and explaining the merits of this new and different medicine.

There is also a Konjola Man at Dow's Drug Store, Diamond and Smithfield streets — also Dow's Drug Store, 5939 Penn avenue, East Liberty.

MEET THESE 61 MURDERERS, TAMED BY TUSSAUD, MILD AS LAMBS

By GEORGE SEIBEL.
(Correspondence by Mail.)

LONDON.

TO MEET 61 murderers in one Sunday afternoon is a harrowing experience. To discover that nearly all of them look as harmless as lambs and as respectable as life insurance agents is a lesson in psychology.

The 61 murderers were all assembled in the Chamber of Horrors that furnishes the real kick of Madame Tussaud's wax works. They are much more interesting than the gallery of royalties under the same roof. Perhaps they have done less harm.

George Seibel

And they are keeping extremely quiet. That may be because Baker street is just around the corner, where Sherlock Holmes has had his headquarters as far back as Conan Doyle can remember.

Madame Tussaud's exhibition has been a feature of London's amusements since 1802. It began in Switzerland as far back as 1757, when Christoph Curtius, uncle of madame, started his "ceroplastic cabinet." It has no real rival except Grevin's in Paris.

Enshrined in The Dictionary

There are murderers here who have contributed words to the English language.

Look up "Burker," a noun, and "to burke," a verb.

They are derived from the name of William Burke, executed in 1829. He and William Hare murdered at least 15 people within 12 months, selling the bodies for dissection. They got their victims drunk and suffocated them.

Another famous murderer was Jack Sheppard, most notorious of highwaymen. He is buried at the church of St. Martins-in-the-Fields, facing Trafalgar Square.

He was a "bad actor," but not far away sleeps Nell Gwynn, who was a good actress.

Most picturesque of all the bloody villains is George Joseph Smith. The bathtub is shown in which he drowned three of his wives in succession. The "Brides of the Bath" case created a sensation 20 years ago.

Literary Lions Less Numerous

Madame Tussaud's menagerie of literary lions is not nearly as formidable as her villains. The living authors are Shaw, Kipling, Wells and Conan Doyle. The dead ones are Shakespeare, Bacon, Milton, Byron, Scott, Chaucer, Hardy, Hugo and Bobbie Burns, who looks far more dangerous than the thugs and assassins.

There is comfort for loyal Caledonians in the fact that Madame Taussaud has been just as unkind to Calvin Coolidge and Dr. Thomas Woodrow Wilson. Their wax images look like miscreants apprehended in some nefarious undertaking and clearly guilty.

But the worst of all is Lord Nelson. If the fair Lady Emma Hamilton fell for such an insignificant epitome of ugliness, not her morals, but her eyesight, must be blamed.

Tussaud's Has Place in History

It may be that the fourth generation of the Tussaud house is not as expert as Monsieur Curtius, who was a friend of Voltaire, or Mme. Marie Tussaud, who was a friend of Empress Josephine.

That original Mme. Tussaud lived to the age of 90. Her weazened wax figure is on exhibition with the rest. She stands guard over a rare collection of ropes with which famous murderers were hanged.

She is a real wonder-worker. She has brought Charles Bradlaugh, the atheist, together with Cardinal Newman. Hindenburg is stading amicably beside Mussolini. All the six wives of Henry VIII form a pleasant family group around their portly spouse.

She is fair to all professions, all nationalities. The Archbishop of Canterbury gets no preference over Jack Dempsey; Rudolf Valentino is treated with as much deference as Oliver Cromwell.

But her real pets are the murderers—61 stranglers, poisoners, etc. Her favorite book must have been De Quincy's "Murder as a Fine Art."

Views of Zep Trip In Hearst Reels

Sir Hubert Wilkins, noted explorer, who made the crossing from Friedrichshafen to New York on the Graf Zeppelin, took pictures of the trip that are being shown exclusively in M-G-M International Newsreel, the combination of the two Hearst newsreels, M-G-M and International Newsreel.

There are many other striking pictures in this remarkable issue of M-G-M International Newsreel.

WALTER WINCHELL — On Broadway

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.

Coney Island

SCENIC railways, ferris wheels, servant girls on high French heels,
Orangeade and red hot dogs, boys and girls in swimming togs,
Dirty beach and glaring sun, everybody having fun—
Subway rides when day is done.

Freaks and movies, ballroom dancing, merry-go-round with horses prancing.
"Pick-up" men who leer and flirt, making eyes at every skirt;
Roasted peanuts, ice cream cones, crowded, tiny parking zones—
Shouts and murmurs, laughs and groans.

"Eat your doggies with a pickle, step up folks it's just a nickle!"
"Take a chance and win a prize," ballyhoo and barker cries.
Take your thoughts from stupid Monday—think of pleasure this is fun day—
Coney Island on a Sunday.

—Helen Kaminsky.

GAG

ACCORDING to Mrs. Allen's little man, Freddie, conditions are very terrible in vaudeville. A concrete example of the low wage is exemplified in the yarn concerning the small-time acrobats who asked a booking agent for an engagement. "Four dollars is the limit for an opening act for Sunday," said the agent.

"How can we take it?" cried one of the team, "it will cost four dollars to haul our rigging over there!"

"Listen," bargained the agent, "take the four dollars and I'll get the janitor to lend you his handtruck. You can wheel the trunk over yourself."

"All right," replied the desperate ham, "but wherever you book us it's got to be downhill!"

INCIDENTALLY

Portland Hoffa argues that she really overheard this one in front of the Palace the other noon. One was a vaudeville actor and the other didn't like talking pictures, either.

First: "I always suspected he was a ham."

Second: Suspected it? I know he's a ham. Everytime he sees two fried eggs he tries to climb on the plate with 'em!"

OOP!

ADDED to our Crisp Cracks from Critical Cusses Dep't is a New York reviewer's cruel comment about Butler Davenport. The vicious crack ran: "He threw his knee out of joint—overacting."

IN REVERSE

Among other amusing observations is the one dealing with George Rice's two midtown restaurants called "The Cottages." He recently spurted his business by featuring the "18-Day Diet" stunt. But while his customers got thin he got fat on the profits, and bought a new home and a new car, all in three months. Yet Rice's taste runs to zoftig mammas, his hostesses, his waitresses and his wife all being plenty plump.

ANYTHING FOR A LAUGH

Very few locals go through a Broadway career without suffering the taunts of their fellows. Perhaps Louis Shurr, who serves as agent for girls and actors for the better shows, takes the most kidding. The other night, for instance, Shurr was introduced to Warendorf, the Astor Hotel florist. "He's a good man to know," said a pal.

"Every time there's an opening night Mr. Shurr buys lots of orchids to send to the girls he books in the show."

"Yeah," interrupted another, "and if it's a very big opening he wears them, himself!"

COMEBACK

THE talkie vogue has its redeeming features for some of the players, after all. There's the case of Bebe Daniels, who was let out when the commotion phlickers started—not because she was not talented, they said, but because her drawing power had wilted. But Miss Daniels never lost confidence and studied voice and hoofing, until she mastered the art. Then she went to William Le Baron, one of Hollywood's most powerful movie magnates, and urged him to give her a test.

"I will be happy to do so," he said, "providing you take the regular 'extra girl' test." Bebe agreed and the test turned out amazingly fine. She was immediately engaged for the "Rio Rita" star assignment, and the rushes, it is reported, reveal that Bebe Daniels will be a sensational smash hit when the picture is seen. Now Mr. Le Baron is signing up his competitors' outcast, confident that big names will continue to draw if handled expertly.

DRAMA

The newspapers recently told of their estrangement. She was once a famous cinemactress and when she married him she said: "I realize we are all fads and my time to fade will come too soon. I have saved some money and I want it invested to take care of us later on." At the time the woman feared a lawsuit so she invested the money (about $75,000) in a garage in her husband's name.

A few weeks ago they told their marital woes to a judge and it appears that she will rate a divorce. But her husband's revenge is sweeter. The garage she bought in his name will be sold next week for $600,000 and she won't get a cent of it!

REPRISAL

YOU hear the strangest things between 42nd and 59th streets. There's the vindictive father who went without slumber for nights figuring out a way to get even with his only son who married against his wishes. It appears that the heir's favorite rendezvous is his father's roadhouse, one of the better places near New York, where the cuisine is excellent. The charged soup comes from his pappy's cellar, and he doesn't have to tip the lackeys.

Father was so aggravated over his son's hasty marriage that instead of cutting him off or disowning him he closed the roadhouse! A placard on the door reads: "Closed During Repairs," but those of us familiar with the "inside" know that the prospering place will not be reopened until the lad strands his squaw.

SOTTO VOCE

D. Robbins: Soceny is not prosounced Sony, and I never said that.
E. Luce: It lacks a wallop.
Atlanta, Ga.: Sorry. It was fact.
Geo. Darby: The rhymes don't, sir.
Estelle Hagedorn: Last stanza jerky.
Busby Berkeley: See Simon & Shuster.
Lora Williams: No, ma'am.

OF ALL THINGS!

WHEN "Abie's Irish Rose" moved into Oliver Bailey's Republic Theater on 42nd street, it still appeared to be a flop. After several weeks had passed with no huge business Mr. Bailey, who found a horseshoe, instructed that it be placed over his stage entrance. That night "Abie" played to capacity, and the fluke hit remained at the Republic for four and a half years.

When the show closed, Bailey removed the horseshoe to his residence, but when the "My Girl Friday" play came to his Republic and revealed no drawing power he thought of his horseshoe and had it nailed over the stage entrance again.

That night the show was raided by the police!

WOMAN HELD IN DRY'S DEATH

DETROIT, Aug. 2.—(INS.)—Mrs. Maxine Heath, pretty 23-year-old privat' secretary, was held today in connection with the death of Richard J. Sandlands, special federal prohibition agent, whose body was found in the Detroit River.

Search continued, meanwhile, for her husband, Jack Heath, 27, a boatman who is alleged to have struggled with Sandlands last Friday night when the officer boarded Heath's small motor cruiser, the Maxine, and attempted to arrest him for violation of navigation laws.

STORIES AGREE

During the scuffle, according to Heath's story as reported by his attorney, both men fell overboard and the officer disappeared while Heath swam back to his boat.

Mrs. Heath was on the boat at the time and has told substantially the same story of the fatal encounter as that related by her husband. She is secretary for Max Finkelston, an attorney, who says Heath came to him Monday, told of the struggle and announced he would surrender himself. He has not appeared.

"FEARED ROBBERY"

Federal agents took Mrs. Heath into custody last night and she was held in a police cell today. She asserts that her husband grappled with Sandlands only after the latter had refused to show his credentials. Heath feared robbery, his wife declares.

Contrary to the story of the Heaths that Sandlands' death resulted from drowning, an autopsy on the body has revealed a broken neck.

FATHER ARRIVES

David J. Sandlands, father of the victim and himself a customs agent at the port of New York, planned to leave today for Brooklyn with the body. The elder Sandlands came here to assist in clearing up his son's death. Besides his father, the dead agent is survived by his mother, widow and two small children, all of New York.

ALL QUIET ON THE WESTERN FRONT by ERICH M. REMARQUE

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Paul Baumer and his soldier comrades all enlisted at 18. During their training, they were abused and persecuted by a former mail-carrier, now Corp. Himmelstross. Hating him, they beat him up the last night. Later, at the front, he appears. One of the privates calls him a "dirty hound." He threatens court-martial. Light sentences are imposed when the lieutenant learns the whole story of the corporal's abuse in camp. Paul and his comrades are back in the front lines. On the way they passed piles of new coffins. Their spirits are low. After days of fighting, the trenches are wrecked. Food is scarce and the barrage is so heavy that none can be brought up. Baumer and his comrades are in hand-to-hand fighting defending their position. After a successful counter-attack, night comes and all is quiet in the trenches. Again the shelling begins; attack, counter-attack, charge, repulse. Young recruits, with little knowledge of warfare, fall the easiest victims. Paul's company has been relieved and casualties are found to be numerous. While in swimming Paul and his comrades speak to several French girls across the canal. That night they visit the girls' home. Paul is granted a furlough but is sorry when he leaves his comrades. Everything at home seems changed and he is not at ease. He hates the silly questions asked about the fighting. Paul goes to see Mrs. Kemmerich and lies to her about the way her son was killed. He has reported back to the camp where he had his first training as a soldier.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER XXIII.

I AM often on guard over the Russians. In the darkness one sees their forms move like sick storks, like great birds. They come close up to the wire fence and lean their faces against it; their fingers hook round the mesh. Often many stand side by side, and breathe the wind that comes down from the moors and the forest.

They rarely speak and then only a few words. They are more human and more brotherly towards one another, it seems to me, than we are. But perhaps that is merely because they feel themselves to be more unfortunate than us. Anyway, the war is over so far as they are concerned. But to wait for dysentery is not much of a life either.

The Territorials who are in charge of them say that they were much more lively at first. They used to have intrigues among themselves, as always happens, and it would often come to blows and knives. But now they are quite apathetic, and listless.

They stand at the wire fence; sometimes one goes away and then another at once takes his place in the line. Most of them are silent; occasionally one begs a cigaret butt.

I see their dark forms, their beards move in the wind. I know nothing of them except that they are prisoners, and that is exactly what troubles me. Their life is obscure and guiltless—if I could know more of them, what their names are, how they live, what they are waiting for, what are their burdens, then my emotion would have an object and might become sympathy. But as it is I perceive behind them only the suffering of the creature, the awful melancholy of life and the pitilessness of men.

A word of command has made these silent figures our enemies; a word of command might transform them into our friends. At some table a document is signed by some persons whom none of us knows, and then for years together that very crime on which formerly the world's condemnation and severest penalty fell, becomes our highest aim. But who can draw such a distinction when he looks at these quiet men with their childlike faces and apostles' beards. Any non-commissioned officer is more of an enemy to a recruit, any schoolmaster to a pupil than they are to us. And yet we would shoot at them again and they at us if they were free.

I am frightened: I dare think this way no more. This way lies the abyss. It is not now the time; but I will not lose these thoughts, I will keep them, shut them away until the war is ended. My heart beats fast: this is the aim, the great, the sole aim, that I have thought of in the trenches; that I have looked for as the only possibility of existence after this annihilation of all human feeling; this is a task that will make life afterward worthy of these hideous years.

I take out my cigarets, break each one in half and give them to the Russians. They bow to me and then they light the cigarets. Now red points glow in every face. They comfort me; it looks as though there were little windows in dark village cottages saying that behind them are rooms full of peace.

The days go by. On a foggy morning another of the Russians is buried; almost every day one of them dies. I am on guard during the burial. The prisoners sing a chorale, they sing in parts, and it sounds almost as if there were no voices, but an organ far away on the moor.

The burial is quickly over.

In the evening they stand again at the wire fence and the wind comes down to them from the beech woods. The stars are cold.

I now know a few of those who speak a little German. There is a musician amongst them, he says he used to be a violinist in Berlin. When he hears that I can play the piano he fetches his violin and plays. The others sit down and lean their backs against the fence. He stands up and plays, sometimes he has that absent expression which violinists get when they close their eyes; or again he sways the instrument to the rhythm and smiles across to me.

He plays mostly folk songs and the others hum with him. They are like a country of dark hills that sing far down under the ground. The sound of the violin stands like a slender girl above it, and is clear and alone. The voices cease and the violin continues alone. In the night it is so thin it sounds frozen; one must stand close up; it would be much better in a room—out here it makes a man grow sad.

Because I have already had a long leave I get none on Sundays. So the last Sunday before I go back to the front my father and eldest sister come over to see me. All day we sit in the Soldiers' Home. Where else could we go, we don't want to stay in the camp. About midday we go for a walk on the moors.

The hours are a torture; we do not know what to talk about, so we speak of my mother's illness. It is now definitely cancer, she is already in the hospital and will be operated on shortly. The doctors hope she will recover, but we have never heard of cancer being cured.

"Where is she then?" I ask.

"In the Luisa Hospital," says my father.

"In which class?"

"Third. We must wait till we know what the operation costs. She wanted to be in the third herself. She said that then she would have some company. And besides it is cheaper."

"So she is lying there with all those people. If only she could sleep properly."

My father nods. His face is broken and full of furrows. My mother has always been sickly; and though she has only gone to the hospital when she has been compelled to, it has cost a great deal of money, and my father's life has been practically given up to it.

"If only I knew how much the operation costs," says he.

"Have you not asked?"

"Not directly, I cannot do that—the surgeon might take it amiss and that would not do, he must operate on mother."

Yes, I think bitterly, that's how it is with us, and with all poor people. They don't dare to ask the price, but worry themselves dreadfully beforehand about it; but the others, for whom it is not important, they settle the price first as a matter of course. And the doctor does not take it amiss from them.

"And the dressings afterwards are so expensive," says my father.

"Doesn't the Invalid's Fund pay anything toward it, then?" I ask.

"Mother has been ill too long."

"Have you any money at all?"

He shakes his head: "No, but I can do some overtime."

I know. He will stand at his desk folding and pasting and cutting until 12 o'clock at night. At 8 o'clock in the evening he will eat some of the miserable rubbish they get in exchange for their food tickets, then he will take a powder for his headache and work on.

In order to cheer him up a bit I tell him a few stories, soldiers' jokes, and the like, about generals and sergeant-majors.

Afterwards I accompany them both to the railway station. They give me a pot of jam and a bag of potato cakes that my mother has made for me.

Then they go off and I return to the camp.

In the evening I spread the jam on the cakes and eat some. But I have no taste for them. So I go out to give them to the Russians. Then it occurs to me that my mother cooked them herself and that she was probably in pain as she stood before the hot stove. I put the bag back in my pack and take only two cakes to the Russians.

We travel for several days. The first aeroplanes appear in the sky. We roll on past transport lines. Guns, guns. The light railway picks us up. I search for my regiment. No one knows exactly where it lies. Somewhere or other I put up for the night, somewhere or other I receive provisions and a few vague instructions. And so with my pack and my rifle I set out again on the way.

By the time I come up they are no longer in that devastated place. I hear we have become one of the flying divisions that are pushed in wherever it is hottest. That does not sound cheerful to me. They tell me of heavy losses that we have been having. I inquire after Kat and Albert. No one knows anything of them.

I search farther and wander about here and there; it is a wonderful feeling. One night and then another I camp out like a red Indian. Then at last I get some definite information, and by the afternoon I am able to report to the orderly room.

The sergeant-major detains me there. The company comes back in two days' time. There is no object in sending me up now.

"What was it like on leave?" he asks, "pretty good, eh?"

"In parts," I say.

"Yes," he sighs, "yes, if a man didn't have to come away again. The second half is always rather messed up by that."

I loaf around until the company comes back in the early morning, grey, dirty, soured, and gloomy. Then I jump up, push in amongst them, my eyes searching. There is Tjaden, there is Muller blow-his nose, and there are Kat and Kropp. We arrange our sacks of straw side by side. I have an uneasy conscience when I look at them, and yet without any good reason. Before we turn in I bring out the rest of the potato cakes and jam so that they can have some, too.

The two outer cakes are mouldly, still it is possible to eat them. I keep those for myself and give the fresh ones to Kat and Kropp.

Kat chews and says: "These are from your mother?"

I nod.

"Good," says he, "I can tell by the taste."

I could almost weep. I can hardly control myself any longer. But it will soon be all right again back here with Kat and Albert. This is where I belong.

"You've been lucky," whispers Kropp to me before we drop off to sleep, "they say we are going to Russia."

To Russia. It's not much of a war over there.

In the distance the front thunders. The walls of the hut rattle.

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Becoming cynical at her mother's wish to have her marry for wealth and social position, Nancy Hollenbeck, young and beautiful, accepts the ardent attentions of Jack Beamer, supposedly an Englishman of noble birth, who is married to a wealthy invalid. On a mountain trip Nancy, after a brief courtship, makes a hasty marriage with a handsome ranger, Roger Decatur. Sickening of the loneliness, with Roger away, she returns home to resume her old life, still keeping her marriage a secret. When Roger, deeply in love with Nancy, comes to take her back, she tells him unless he makes his home in the city she will divorce him, although she realizes her own love for him. After Roger leaves, Nancy continues her clandestine affair with Beamer, whose wife, aware of his philandering, refuses to free him. Louise, Nancy's sister, always second with men, now has a rich, though elderly, suitor. Beamer takes Nancy out to his stock farm on a jaunt. Mrs. Beamer unexpectedly arrives and Nancy is bundled into the kitchen. Beamer decides to placate his wife to protect his own financial welfare. Nancy, though humiliated, forgives all when he phones. At home Nancy assails her mother for catering to Lachman, Louise's rich admirer.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XLI.

THERE was some reason why she ought to be home tonight, but Louise couldn't remember just what it was. She ought to telephone and tell mamma she wasn't coming. But by the time you've found a telephone booth and got a connection, and been scolded from the other end of the wire half the fun is gone, and Lou wanted it all tonight. Every bit of it.

"I'd love to come," she said, and laughed into his dark, smiling eyes. She felt reckless and young and gay. Not part of the family at all.

Mat grinned back at her and stepped on the starter. Nothing happened. He stepped again. Still no action. They looked at each other and broke into crazy, hilarious laughter.

After he had cranked it and the old car shuddered and jerked and started at last Mat remembered there wasn't much gas. He scratched his head. "I'm darned if I see how we're going to buy gas and two dinners on $1.85!"

Lou turned out her purse. A powder puff, lipstick, keys and three quarters.

"Great, we're rich!"

And so the adventure began. A decrepit car, a shabby knight, a truant girl. They drove into the hills back of the university. A roundabout way to an Italian dinner . . . The night was quiet and dark. A cool little wind touched them gently, caressingly. The scent of the spring, the warm, rich smell of growing things rose intoxicatingly from the earth.

They drove—but what does it matter where they drove? Neither Louise nor Mat knew nor cared. They were off the highway, bumping along some rural road. And without any practice at all, Lou's head came to rest on his shoulder.

Eucalyptus, pungent and graceful, shut out all view of the city. Somewhere below the road a creek tinkled over stones. In the ticket of willow bordering the stream night birds chittered.

"Mat, isn't it—isn't it—heaven?"

"Oh, Lou, you're lovely—lovely!"

He bent to kiss her; habit again. Parked car, pretty girl. She lifted her head to meet his kiss. Her arms went out to him, sweetly, generously . . . "Mat, . . . my very dear. . . ." And in that moment, with the small night wind blowing his hair and his cheek against hers, Mat Tully knew that the thing he had speculated about, and scoffed at, and never really believed in, had happened to him. He had fallen in love.

"We won't wait any longer," mamma said brightly, tremulously. "Something must have delayed Louise. We'll just go ahead."

"An accident?" Mr. Lachman began hopefully. Not that he wanted Louise injured, of course. But a traffic jam . . . he could drive down and get her. He half rose from his chair.

"Oh, no; I'm sure that any moment—"

And papa said, "Now don't worry, Oliver; she's probably just forgotten that you were coming. These rattle-brained girls!"

"Forgotten!" . . . forgotten him? Mr. Lachman's dinner was sawdust in his mouth. Forgotten him, had she? After all he'd spent already!

"I'm afraid the chicken is just a little overdone . . . Peter, give Mr. Lachman a little more of the breast," Mrs. Hollenbeck quavered, reminding him that he was eating.

He spread a large, mottled hand protestingly over his plate. "No! No more for me, thank you. Very delicious!" It really was very good. He'd have liked the wishbone, still on the platter. And a bit of the crackly brown skin. Why didn't they cook it this way in restaurants? But he had resolved to snub his hostess. He wouldn't have any more.

He refused the cake, the coffee, papa's cigar.

"Louise ought to be here any moment now!" poor Papa Hollenbeck said again, anxious eyes on the clock.

"Hum," murmured Mr. Lachman, high forehead aglitter, long nose moist with emotion.

When mamma couldn't stand it any longer she crept into the kitchen, where Grandma Hollenbeck, scraping dishes, was salvaging chicken bones for the Whaleys' cat.

"I hope you're satisfied," she sobbed. "Stirring up trouble between me and my girls. Oh, you needn't talk—I know—I know you put Nancy up to saying what she did about Mr. Lachman. Louise, too . . . . I suppose you know where she is!"

The old lady's eyes flashed. Her work-worn hand, red from the dish water, went stealing to her petticoat pocket . . . . but the pocket was empty, of course. She had given away her independence, given it to Nancy.

"I'm getting sick of it!" the younger woman shrilled. "I'll have you know this is my house! I won't have any interference with my . . . . my . . . ."

Her voice trailed off. The front door. Louise! Louise had come in.

"Hello, everybody . . . . oh, how do you do, Mr. Lachman? Mat and I went for a ride . . . papa, you remember Mat Tully? And, Mr. Lachman, you've met Mr. Tully, too, I think?"

Mr. Lachman extended a large, damp hand and sank back into his chair, exhausted.

Nancy, hearing the commotion, ran downstairs and resumed her seat at the piano. Papa attempted feeble pleasantries. Mamma's nervous laughter punctuated her polite conversation. Even Mat was ill at ease. But Lou . . . Lou was sparkling, aflame with excitement, oblivious of the family, of Mr. Lachman, of everything but Mat.

"And we haven't had a bite to eat—we were going to dinner, and we got lost or something . . . is that chicken I smell? Come on, Mat; let's go out in the kitchen, grandma is out there. Grandma is the darlingest one in the family, Mat—she'll feed us—"

Mamma's hand went to her collar, but she seemed to have lost the power of speech. She couldn't talk.

Mr. Lachman rose. He was very pale, and little beads of perspiration glistened on his long upper lip. "Just a moment Miss—Miss Louise," he began, jovially. "You're not going to desert us? After I came all the distance from San Francisco, leaving important business and social duties, to see you?"

"It was very rude of you, my dear," Mamma cut in nervously, conscious of the crisis in the air, and afraid, oh, terribly afraid, that Louise wouldn't rise to the occasion, wouldn't stop chattering to that silly boy and say something charming . . .and it would have to be very charming. . .to bring Mr. Lachman back to good nature.

Lou hesitated. Glanced reluctantly kitchenward, and then back to mamma and Mr. Lachman. "I'm sorry—if I'd known you were coming I'd have been here, of course."

Mr. Lachman breathed again. He stuck both hands in his pockets and teetered back and forth on his heels. "Oh, so they forgot to tell you!" His cold, fishy eyes rested triumphantly upon papa. Aha! Just as I thought! More of your inefficiency! he seemed to say.

Then Lou, conscious-stricken, "Oh, this is Thursday. I'd forgotten. Please forgive me, Mr. Lachman!"

He'd never forget, but he might forgive her. After all, she was very young and very lovely. While he was groping for just the right words to say, smiling down at her fatuously, she began to laugh, joyously, liftingly, the way Nancy used to laugh a year ago.

Between gasps of bubbling, choking laughter she managed to say, "Wasn't it funny? I didn't just forget Mr. Lachman and the family dinner party. I forgot to have dinner at all! And oh, Mat, I'm so hungry now. . . . Weren't we the idiots? Come on out in the kitchen!"

The door banged behind them. In the sudden strained silence Nancy's voice rose shrilly:

"Isn't love grand?"

MADE A GREAT CHANGE IN HER

North Side Lady Relates How New Medicine, Ten Herbs, Ended Ills.

That Ten Herbs, the new compound for stomach, liver, kidney and bowel disorders, rheumatism, neuritis and nervousness, is no ordinary medicine, has been shown many times by the published statements of men and women of this section. Many claim it was the only thing that ended their health troubles. The remarkable success of Ten Herbs is due to its ten wonderful natural ingredients, which have a cleansing, soothing, correcting action on the whole human system. If you have any such ills as are mentioned above, get a bottle of Ten Herbs today at May's Main Store, Fifth and Liberty, Pittsburgh, where this famous medicine is being introduced. It has helped others and why not you?

"Ten Herbs made a great change in me," said Mrs. Gertrude Miller, 1234 Dickson street, North Side, Pittsburgh. "When I used Ten Herbs some months ago, my stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels were disordered, but your medicine gave me complete and lasting relief. I had pains all over my body, and my bowels were very irregular. I believe the pains in my back were due to my disordered kidneys. Gas formed in my stomach and caused pains around my heart. My liver was sluggish, and I had black spots before my eyes. At times I would lose my voice, and I was very nervous all the time.

"After taking Ten Herbs awhile, my appetite improved, and by stomach was in such splendid condition I could eat things I did not dare to eat before—no more gas or pains around my heart. My bowels were regulated and I was free of nervousness. Pains left me, and my sleep became sound and restful. My liver was benefited, and I felt fine in every way. I gladly recommend Ten Herbs to the public."

Ten Herbs is being introduced at May's Main Store, Fifth and Liberty, Pittsburgh, and is sold at all May's Drug Stores.

Eckener Takes Zeppelin Over Steamship Lane; Sure of Success

By KARL H. VON WIEGAND,

Famous correspondent who will make the Hearst-Zeppelin flight around the world and report the trip exclusively for the Hearst newspapers.

ON BOARD GRAF ZEPPELIN, LAKEHURST, N. J., Aug. 8.—At 12:14 we begin to move out of the hangar.

"Weather map is excellent," said Dr. Eckener to me; "I think we will take a course about 200 miles south of Cape Race and if present indications hold good we shall follow the winter steamship route."

Dr. Eckener was in excellent humor, which always is the barometer for the ship. Capt. Lehmann, flight commander, is on the bridge. He will be relieved in a few minutes by Capt. von Schiller, who will have the bridge till 4 in the morning. At 12:25 we are out of the hangar. The ship floats like a feather. Dr. Eckener is bending over the chart on a table in the dining room. I have never seen Eckener and the officers less concerned at the beginning of a flight than tonight. The field is flooded with searchlights. It is an eerie picture. We shall head for New York, Dr. Eckener tells me.

The Graf Zeppelin, queen of the air, is ready to slip the mooring lines that hold her down to earth—ready and seemingly eager, to start on the Hearst-Zeppelin round the world flight and to contribute another chapter to the rapidly developing science of aeronautics. I am the first passenger to put my bags in my cabin. I will share it with Sir Hubert Wilkins, the famous British explorer, or with Lieut. Com. Charles E. Rosendahl, observer for the United States Navy, who on this flight is the guest of William Randolph Hearst.

Nine Countries

Nine countries—eight nationalities—are represented on board in the great adventure of the air. They are Germany, America, England, Australia, France, Spain, Switzerland, Russia, Japan. That attests the world wide interest. It also shows the healthy broad international character of the expedition and no less the intelligent liberal views in that respect of the grim old commodore of the air, Dr. Hugo Eckener.

With all the world interested in the start of the Graf Zeppelin from Lakehurst last night, the naval air station here and the lounge of the Graf Zeppelin was on my arrival the quietest and least excited spot. More than a hundred thousand people had swarmed through and around the big airship dock during the day. Only a small fringe remained. The sun—a big red ball—was just sinking in the west. Through the giant "dock" there floated sweetly sad music from the loud speaker in the building that for the first time today made me reflective and touched a melancholy note in me.

None of the officers were about. Nothing from which one might suspect that a history-making event in human progress was about to be inaugurated. Only the chief steward, Henry Kubie, was on hand, and he took my baggage. Dr. Eckener, Capts. Lehmann and Fleming were being given a farewell dinner by Capt. Pierce, commander of the air station; Commander Clarke and other naval officers, at the bachelors officers' headquarters. In the lounge of the Graf Zeppelin a few people were awaiting their passenger friends. Knut Eckener, the manly young son of the commodore, whom we all admire and like for his splendid qualities and who will be our chief helmsman on this flight, came from the bridge and greeted me. He asked for Lady Drummond Hay and expressed his pleasure that she would again be our companion in all that we may meet in the air lane that we are to blaze around the globe.

No Time to Think

What were my thoughts at the eleventh hour of this epochal voyage that will swing us to the edge of the Arctic regions and then down into the torrid heat of Japan in August, only to dash on the long curve north to the chilly fogs of the Aleutian Islands again?

There has been no time for me to think. I have had to keep my mind on a hundred small details that had to be attended to at the last moment. The telephone rang incessantly. Callers came. Telegrams and cablegrams of Godspeed were brought. I got up at 5 this morning and even at that did not begin to finish all that I should have done. I wanted to consult my lawyer about a will. There wasn't time. I wanted to say goodbye to my friends on the telephone. It was impossible. Then I missed the Blue Comet on the Jersey Central because the porter at the hotel evidently was mistaken about the time of departure. The hazards of the unusual journey, such as there may be, occupied not a moment's time in my mind. Tonight I am too weary to think about it. I look about and envy some of fellow travelers who are all excitement and anticipation. I merely wish that I might once, like they, just travel and do nothing except enjoy myself. I travel and—work!

I have just rushed back 9,000 miles from far off China and now I am starting on a 25,000-mile air journey. I can only think of the things I have neglected to do and promises made that I could not keep, simply for the lack of time. So for me thrills tonight are wholly mental because the nerves refuse to take them up. A few hours' sleep—that will not be till toward dawn, all all the old-time zest for the extraordinary adventure will come back.

High Hatters Orchestra To Make Radio Debut

By DARRELL V. MARTIN, Sun-Telegraph Radio Editor.

LIKE John Philip Sousa, the High Hatters' Orchestra has come to realize the place and importance of radio in the life of American homes. For years this crack dance ensemble has "high-hatted" everything including radio, but tonight they come into our magic realm.

Some of their latest recordings, full of ginger, will be served fans at 8:30 o'clock from WCAE during the Victor program.

We are moved to call your attention to a queer orchestration of Vincent Lopez which will emanate from KDKA at 7:30 p. m. "Coney Island Fantasy" has been guaranteed to describe with exactitude the boisterous pleasures offered by New York's playground—the screams of excitement from the roller coaster, the shrill whistle of the peanut man, cracking rifles in the shooting gallery, the rush and sweep of waves on the beach. Sounds great.

Lovers of good music will appreciate Merle Alcock, contralto, who will be guest soloist with the Buffalo Civic Symphony, WJAS at 9:30.

WAKEMAN AT WEAF

C. A. Wakeman, chief announcer of WCAE, will be master of ceremonies during the "Evening Stars" program tomorrow morning at 11:30 o'clock in the WEAF studio. Mr. Wakeman will introduce Devora Nadworney, contralto, and Robert Simmons, tenor. Their program will be dedicated to Pittsburgh and WCAE.

We Now Present

Guess what? The music library of KDKA is said to be insured for $20,000. Among its treasures are several original compositions. To Victor Szudek, musical director, goes credit for assembling what is perhaps the most complete and comprehensive library in any radio studio.

Combining business with pleasure, Frances Doherr and her husband, Edward Doherr, have departed on an automobile tour of the East and Central West. They will spend three weeks visiting WEAF, WJZ, WGR, WJR, WENR, KYW and other stations. Frances is manager of WCAE—the only woman station manager in the world—and Edward is manager of Gimbel's radio department. One might look for statle in this radio family, but to the contrary they are very happy in their environment. At home Frances has one set calibrated for WCAE only, so that she may check on the station at all times. "Eddie" has at least three sets on trial always and tinkers until the wee small hours testing new developments. They know radio.

Incidentally, the mystery girl in the Gospel Song Hour at WCAE is Frances herself. How do you like the pseudonym "Alice Dubois"?

KQV and WMBJ both will be improved before the snow falls, giving Pittsburghers the choice of programs from five local stations.

Where is Charles W. Hamp? James A. Simpson, manager of the Pittsburgh Radio Show, would like to know. Hamp is the one radio artist that Pittsburghers would prefer to see at the show, according to the poll being conducted by the Sun-Telegraph.

We have been accused of press-agenting Charles Hamp and other jazz bandsters. And we orthodox classicists? It's a funny world.

A very pleasant thing about working for Mr. Hearst is his "get-fired-quick" rule for press-agenting people. We have heard it said that a good reporter in New York lost his job because he accepted a decoration from a foreign country which influenced his written reports. Not only that, but a newspaperman not under obligation to outside interests will give his readers NOTHING BUT NEWS. And that goes for radio in Pittsburgh as well as everywhere else. Distributors of hats, socks, suits, rubber checks and filthy lucre of the commonwealth who expect unusual consideration for their gifts will kindly take notice.

We know of one instance where a newspaper editor charged for publicity space by the inch. The Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph has advertising columns for this purpose. And news columns for news. Which explains READER CONFIDENCE.

Louis L. Kaufman, senior announcer of KDKA, after six years "on the air" recently endured his first trip "in it" as a passenger in the "Pathfinder," a Stinson Detroiter traveling between Bettis Field and Washington, D. C. "Never having been associated with blue skies or heaven any closer than a sacred song program I was very nervous at first, but enjoyed the trip so much I think I will take up flying," Lou told the Sun-Telegraph.

John Frazier, since the beginning of broadcasting the plant manager of KDKA, has been appointed special representative of the radio operations department in charge of general construction, maintenance and negotiations. He is succeeded by D. A. Myer, since 1925 plant manager of WBZ-WBZA. In making these changes it is believed that Walter C. Evans, superintendent of Westinghouse radio operations, is paving the way for construction of the 200,000 watt plant at Saxonburg.

ARSON BLAMED FOR FIRE

Fire of incendiary origin partly destroyed a two-story unoccupied frame dwelling in Creighton Hollow, East Deer Township, early today, township police reported.

Two oil-soaked mattresses and two cans that are believed to have contained kerosene were found in the house after the blaze had been extinguished, according to Charles G. Renner, police chief He notified County Fire Marshal Thomas L. Pfarr. The house is owned by Mrs. Susie Cutt, of Cleveland, O., police said.

Suspects Exonerated In Swindling Charge

Sam Kostechi, 40, of 109 Ella street, and Pete Gall, 43, of 235 Munson avenue, McKees Rocks, stand completely exonerated of charges of swindling Joseph Krolikowski, of Conneaut Lake. Krolikowski, swindled of $2,500, viewed the two men at the County Detective Bureau and announced he had never seen either.

Krolikowski reported to Conneaut Lake authorities on Monday that a McKees Rocks resident had obtained $2,500 from him to invest in Pittsburgh. Kostechi and Gall were registered at the resort as from McKees Rocks and their arrest was ordered.

Meditations of a Wife

By HELEN ROWLAND

Love-Control

LOVE-CONTROL—and how to get it. This is the vital problem which faces the modern woman who has got about everything else she wanted and went after.

"The battle of the sexes is not for money but for love-control," says Prof. William Marston, psychologist, who is always saying something interesting.

* * *

SO THAT explains all this sudden sex-antagonism which is filling the world with man-haters and woman-haters and hard-boiled bachelors and confirmed bachelorettes!

HELEN ROWLAND

The Tender Passion has ceased to be a skilled fencing-match and has become a plain wrestling match, an open struggle for supremacy, beside which woman's fight for economic independence looks like a little game of ping-pong.

But the quickest and surest way to get love-control, dear heart, is not to TRY. The winner in the love-contest is the one who does not take the game too seriously—the one who keeps a cool heart, a steady head and a poker face, and does not overplay his hand.

You can get almost anything in this world that you want by going AFTER it—except love. But love, like your shadow, flees when you pursue it and follows you when you flee from it. Somehow, when you run after a man all you get is the exercise.

* * *

That is why men have the love-control everywhere since the world began. Love is and always has been so much less important to a man than a woman. Nature has given him a big handicap of nonchalance, indifference and self-assurance.

* * *

Love-control is a matter of self-control, heart-control and emotional control. Nobody can win any kind of battle, from a prize-fight to a war, when he loses his poise, his balance, his aim and his head.

A love-affair is always happier and smoother when the big balance of love is on the MAN'S side. A woman can stand being loved a whole lot more than a man can. In woman's bright lexicon there is no such thing as TOO MUCH love.

In love a woman is always twenty leaps ahead of a man. Her mind is at the altar, putting up the decorations, while his is still floating around in the hazy flush of budding romance. She has the wedding-day all set and the bridesmaids all picked out before he has discovered the real color of her eyes. By "beating him to it" she defeats her own ends.

No Don Juan was ever a genuine woman-hater. And no successful siren was ever an honest man-heater. They are too busy lighting one flame from the embers of another to get seriously cynical about it.

* * *

To win in the love-game, be sweet, be kind, be amiable, be lovable—but always keep your heart at a slightly lower temperature than the man's and your emotions held back to a slower pace than his.

* * *

Why should there be a "battle of the sexes," anyway?

* * *

You may win in business, in war or in politics by a "battle;" but the only way to win "love-control" is by sweet, friendly, amicable INDIFFERENCE. Where there is the least love, there is the most "control!"

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Rheumatism Due to Infection, Not Cold

HABIT, custom and tradition have fixed in our minds all sorts of convictions about things. A notable example is the popular idea that rheumatism is the result of exposure to weather. Cold and moisture are supposed to produce the symptoms usually called "rheumatic."

DR. COPELAND

Of course, scientific physicians no longer hold to this belief. They recognize rheumatism as merely the evidence of some sort of an infection. They do not dispute that cold and damp weather may increase the pain, but the disease itself they regard as being due to an infection.

It isn't easy to get away from ideas we have held all our lives. We hate to be convinced that scarlet fever and smallpox are not transmitted through the air, but are contracted only by direct physical contact with the afflicted one.

Where is there a man or woman past 50 who cannot recall running past a neighbor's house and on the other side of the street at that, a house where there was a sign, "measles" or "diphtheria"? You even held your breath and perhaps pinched your nose tightly so not to breathe in the "miasm."

But we are forced to accept these "new fangled" ideas about the "contagious" diseases. So we must revise our thought about rheumatism. We must seek some local disease, in tonsils, teeth, or elsewhere, to find the real cause of this ailment.

There are various types of rheumatism. It may be active or chronic; it may be muscular or in the joints. It may be called "lumbago" or "stiff neck." It has various names, but no matter where it is or what form it takes, the causes are the same.

Many young children have adenoids and diseased tonsils. They may be harboring dangerous germs. Not only rheumatism, but also heart disease may be traced to adenoids and tonsils.

You should talk with your doctor if you suspect trouble of this sort. Early attention may spare your child all sorts of pain and inconvenience. Rheumatism may be headed off and a lifetime of comfort provided by your foresight.

A mouthful of bad teeth, with pussy gums and abscesses, will lay the foundation for much distress. If the joints or muscles are sore to the touch, or painful, take pains to find out what is wrong. Some remote disturbance, easily corrected by proper treatment, may be responsible for unnecessary disease.

Tomorrow's Horoscope

Friday, August 9.

A DAY of unusual, irregular and unforeseen activities and possibly perils is to be read from the predominant rule, both by lunar and mutual direction, of Uranus, the eccentric, unconventional, revolutionary and radical. There are likely to be sudden upheavals as well as entirely unlooked-for benefits or advantages, but the latter must be attained by great calmness, business acumen and clever manipulation of these sudden circumstances and opportunities. Litigation, quarrels and unwise personal contacts are particularly hazardous.

Those whose birthday it is are on the eve of a year of whirlwind activities, with sudden visitations and unforeseen circumstances. These may be manipulated to peril or progress by wise choices and clever methods. Important change seems imminent. Shun law, quarrels and personal injuries or accidents. Be discreet with strangers.

A child born on this day may have a unique or spectacular career, possibly in the public eye. Finances may be fortified.

The First Mate

Drawn by Dorothy Flack

AFTER years of sailing alone the skipper has decided that he needs help. Therefore—the first mate! It's been a long and lonesome voyage for him, but somehow or other it never struck him that he needed anyone along. Until Dan Cupid discovered him all alone and then——!

It was the longest time before he could find out what was wrong. Nothing seemed to be right. Things that he once thought wonderful suddenly palled. The sky wasn't nearly as bright as he remembered it could be. The sun didn't shine so brilliantly and somehow or other nothing at all mattered. He just drifted along aimlessly and it was in that mood that Dan caught him.

Whispered hints at opportune moments turned his thoughts toward his own lonesomeness and suddenly, when she came within his line of vision, he knew what was the matter.

And now—Skipper, Mate and Dan are embarked on the sea of happiness for a long voyage to the Port o' Dreams and all's well again!

LOVE'S AWAKENING

A Continuation of Love's Embers

By ADELE GARRISON

Madge Feels that Mary Is Not Lost to Noel Forever.

"MARY?" Noel Veritzen's voice was little more than a choked whisper as he put the question, and with a lively dread of what shock the next few minutes might bring him, I smothered my reluctance to tell him of the betrothal I had sanctioned but a few hours before.

If Georges and Mary should come into the room, I did not believe the young and arrogant prince could resist the temptation to announce the engagement to Noel. His gloating would not be boastful but real, and I told myself fiercely that I would not permit the sensitive boy facing me to undergo that ordeal without being prepared for it.

"Yes, Noel," I said softly, but rapidly, "that is Mary's voice and Prince Georges is with her. Listen to me!" I made the words emphatic. "There is something you must know before they come in, but you must not take it seriously. Mary found out yesterday—never mind how—that Princess Olina had asked you to marry her, and that you had consented. In a fit of pique—I am sure it was nothing else—she promised to marry Prince Georges and they are going to announce it at a little dinner soon. Don't look like that!"

The color left his face and his eyes stared wildly at me. "Pull yourself together, boy!" I said. "They may come in here any second."

I had been conscious as I spoke of a voice outside the window—that of Prince Georges—questioning Mary's reason for not entering the restaurant. And even as Noel—obeying my behest—gathered strength from somewhere to draw a mask of composure over his agitated face, Mary's voice sounded again, this time coaxingly.

"Georges, dear, I know I'm an awful pest, but really can't we go somewhere else? I—I—don't like—this place. I—I—can't stand it to—dine here."

"As you wish, of course, dearest." The young prince's voice was that of a tender, adoring lover, though I was sure I caught a note of annoyance in it. And then their footsteps retreated down the veranda, and in another minute we heard a car drive away.

It was not until then that Noel found voice, and the mournful cadence of his tone, the suffering in his eyes caught at my throat despite my annoyance at his helpless hopelessness concerning Mary.

"Did you hear her?" he asked miserably. "She said she——"

"Didn't like the place and couldn't stand it here," I repeated glibly as he stopped. "Yes, I heard her, and if you want proof of her caring for you instead of Prince Georges, you couldn't have a better one."

His eyes, big, bewildered, searched mine.

"I—I don't see," he stammered.

"You and she have been here together, haven't you?" I persisted ruthlessly, feeling a bit like a vivisectionist. "And the memory of that visit is—a somewhat—tender one?"

The red which dyed his face and neck was my answer, and I hurried on.

"Then don't you see why she can't 'stand it' to dine here?" I persisted. "Memories are swaying her, too, and she cannot bear to dine with another admirer in the same place."

His eyes lightened for a moment, then shadowed again.

"But that doesn't alter the fact that she's engaged to him," he said.

"And it depends upon yourself absolutely whether she goes on being engaged to him," I retorted.

He straightened himself, startled.

"What do you mean?" he asked.

"Simply this," I told him. "Mary just now is chagrined by your engagement, and now that she has found out Georges' identity—she did not know it when she accepted him—she is a bit dazzled by the notion of a possible throne—you know what gossamer and moonshine a romantic girl's notions are. But she is so high-spirited and he so masterful that the glamor won't last many weeks—you see I speak confidently. The one thing for you to do is to assert yourself when that time comes and sweep her off her feet."

He stiffened involuntarily.

"I never have cared for the position of second violin," he said a bit frigidly.

"My dear boy," I said impatiently. "In Mary's orchestra you are not only the first violin but the 'cello, the trombone and the drum, only she doesn't quite realize it yet. Are you going to risk losing her and your happiness because of a bit of foolish pride?"

"No; oh! no," he answered. "Tell me what you wish me to do."

"For the present, nothing save play the devoted lover to Princess Olina," I answered.

"But——" he stammered. "I don't understand. I thought you said I must not marry her?"

Correct Manners

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

Restaurant Dining.

"DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN: When a lady and a man friend dine in a restaurant, who should order the dinner?

D. A. I.

THEY consult together about what they wish to order, and then the gentleman gives both order's the lady's first to the waiter.

The Bride Dictates.

"DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN: 1. Is it correct to suggest what those in the wedding procession should wear? Or is it an imposition?

2. At a formal evening wedding is it necessary for the man escorting the bridegroom to wear full dress attire or is the Tuxedo correct? The best man and the bride's father are wearing full dress; the ushers are wearing Tuxedos. WORRIED.

NOT only is it correct, but, in the well-planned wedding, it is taken for granted that the bride outline in detail exactly what she wishes her attendants to wear and the bridegroom should do exactly the same for his attendants. Indeed, so important is it that the attire of every member of the wedding party should be correct and most carefully carried out that often the bride and bridegroom have their plans for the attire written out or typewritten. And quite sensible this is, too, and the list should include every item of the ensemble. Abiding by these clothes plans is one of the things that attendants-to-be take for granted when they accept the invitation to be attendants.

2. At such a wedding—a formal evening wedding—all the gentlemen should wear full dress. It is extremely important that the ushers should wear full dress, since they are very much "on show" for an hour before the time set for the wedding ceremony. And the gentlemen who "escorts" the bridegroom should also wear full dress.

Crackers With Soup

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN: When eating soup, should the crackers be put in it or should you eat them as you would bread?

YOU eat crackers as you would bread. Do not put them into the soup.

How to Test Your Radio Just by Listening

How, without technical knowledge, can you test your radio set in order to find out whether or not you are getting good reception?

One way is to listen to the fifteen-minute "music and your radio" period, broadcast in the National Home Hour every Wednesday morning by Atwater Kent, the radio manufacturer, over WEAF and associated stations.

This broadcast is both entertaining and educational. It is part of a program known as the National Home Hour. The audience constitutes a meeting, with the announcer, Alois Havrilla, acting as chairman.

Each week a different group of musical instruments is introduced. A group of wood-winds may be demonstrated one week, followed by several brass instruments and then by a group of strings.

Each instrument is introduced separately, illustrating its range, its peculiar tone quality and its place in an orchestra. It plays a solo, and then the group as a whole plays a familiar passage.

In this way, listeners learn the names of bits of music with whose strains they may already be familiar. They also learn something of the role of every instrument in an orchestra, and presently they can recognize and name the different instruments by the sound. All this leads to a better understanding of the music which comes by radio.

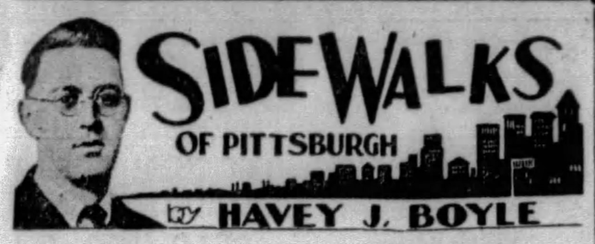
METROPOLITAN DISTRICT NEWS

COMMUNISTS DEFY POLICE; HOLD RALLY



BERLIN, Germany.

I KNOW now how the immigrants used to feel when they first came to Pittsburgh to work in the mills. No one could understand them. Well, in Berlin I was just about as nice a "hunkey" as you ever saw, carrying my grip and showing persons an envelope with an address on it, which turned out to be entirely fictitious. There was no such number on the street mentioned. After a half hour of pointing and gesturing I managed to find a hotel where English was spoken and after that the way was not hard. But to be in a city where no one understands what you are trying to say is quite a sensation.

In Paris things relatively are cheap, but in Berlin the prices are on a par with prices in New York or Pittsburgh. In fact, in certain connections the prices are well beyond reach. For instance, I like a certain kind of American cigaret but when the clerk told me a pack cost exactly $1.50 I at once took a liking to German cigarets. The tariff wall against foreign tobacco, of course, is the reason.

TAXICAB prices are higher than New York's while the hotels, too, ask more money than American hotels ask. The meals retail at the American standard. Beer is less expensive. For the equivalent of 10 cents you can get a glass that will take two hands to lift. The bars are spotless, and are visited by men and women and boys. They nearly all carry pocketbooks to house the pfennings and marks. Instead of standing at a bar, in some places at least, the visitor stands at a big cask, of which there are several scattered around the room, and off the casks the Teutons hoist their beer.

There are some 58,000 cafes in Paris; in Berlin there seems to be a beer store every place you turn. I was there only two nights and a day but in spite of all the beer stores I didn't see anyone plastered.

As in Paris there are sidewalk restaurants and cafes in Berlin, and outdoor eating places.

In the Winter Garten I saw a typical vaudeville show. At the intermission everyone leaves the auditorium and goes to the lobby where beer and wieners go like the well-known hot cakes. To the rear of the auditorium there are tables where the customers eat and drink while the magician produces his rabbits or the bicycle rider makes a circle without holding onto the handle bars.

A WALK along Unter der Linden indicates that the morals of the wicked city should be looked into by the local chief of police. It seems, in certain sections, to be trysting places of importance.

The police here are fine, courteous and attentive. They touch their hats as you ask them a question and most of them manage to understand your broken tongue in articulating the name of the place you seek.

IT IS not so gay as Paris, but there seems to be a fresher air about the amusement places. Although prices are high and the Germans complain about the unemployed there is no sign of distress in the streets. Even granting that a lot of the persons were visitors, the people on the streets seemed well dressed and prosperous looking, a change from five years ago when they were wearing clothing made out of paper and when it took a million marks to buy a package of cigarets.

* * *

Berlin scores heavily over Paris in the matter of coffee. Coffee in Berlin is coffee. In Paris it is something else again.

EVANS ENTERS RACE TO HOLD CITY POST

Stands on Record in Office Of Controller in Plea To Voters for Support

Controller Henry O. Evans today announced his candidacy for the Republican nomination in the primary September 17, to fill the unexpired term of the late John H. Henderson.

Evans' action is expected to silence rumors that he woud seek the nomination for mayor.

Former Controller Henderson died last December in the first year of a four-year term and in January Council elected Evans to fill the office until the November election, when the people would choose a controller for the balance of Henderson's term.

Henry O. Evans

Evans' statement reviewed the large yearly revenue disbursed by the controller's office and declared that the incumbent should possess initiative, executive ability and independence.

RESTS ON RECORD

He said the controller owed loyalty only to the people and rested his claim for their favorable consideration on his record before and after assuming the controller's office.

Evans' statement:

"On September 17, the voters are to select their candidate for the office of supreme importance, one of the most strategic and influential in the city government—that of the city controller.

"Through the controller's office there is now disbursed over $25,000,000 a year, received in taxes, together with other millions received from the sale of bonds. He should have not only the desire, but the ability to devise and put into execution modern methods for saving money and improving efficiency. Reaching, as it does, into every department and going to the very heart of a proper financial administration of the city's varied affairs, the controller's office can profoundly effect the whole tone of city government.

CITES IMPROVEMENTS

"I point, with just pride and satisfaction, to the record of improvements already inaugurated and in successful operation in the controller's office. As there are still further improvements to be made, I desire election for the remainder of my predecessor's term.

"The office of controller comes direct from the people; to them, alone, loyal service is due. The controller should take no orders except from his independent judgment and his own conscience. My record, before coming into this office, as well as since, entitles me to claim entire independence of thought and action and on that record I am submitting my candidacy to the Republican voters at the September primaries.

"I solicit election in order to finish a program, well-begun, which I am convinced will result in benefit to the public."

POLICE HELPING REDS HOLD PEACEFUL MEETING

POLICE KEEPING CROWD IN ORDER SO THAT COMMUNISTS COULD ADDRESS NORTH SIDE MEETING

While a city stenographer took verbatim notes to be turned over to the law department, North Side police last night at Union avenue and East street kept peace so that Communists—twice balked recently—could hold a mass meeting.

Capt. Block Sends Cordon To Maintain Order; City May Prosecute Leaders

After two unsuccessful attempts, Communists finally held a mass meeting last night at Union avenue and East Ohio street—without a city permit and without police interference.

A cordon of police stood idly by, doing little else than clearing the streets of a curious crowd that assembled to witness the breaking up of the meeting.

On the sidelines stood a city stenographer, taking shorthand notes, which when copied, will be submitted to the city law department to have cited the various violations of city ordinances.

Copies of the stenographic notes had not been received at noon today by either Police Superintendent Peter P. Walsh or the city law department.

MOUNT SOAP BOX

Unmolested, Pat Devine, district organizer of the Communist League; Samuel Herman, district organizer of the Young Communists League; Pat Toohey, and his wife, Fanny; Albert Kearns, and several others, mounted on a soap box, voiced their defiance at capitalists, at the police, at working conditions and explained the Communist platform of higher wages and shorter working periods.

The meeting had been called to protest the breaking up of a similar demonstration on the same site August 1, when police dispersed the assemblage and lodged 28 in the North Side station. Of these four were found guilty of violating a city ordinance, preventing the holding of a public meeting without a permit.

ASKED FOR PERMIT

When informed yesterday afternoon by Capt. Anthony Block that the meeting could not be held without a permit, Devine declared he applied to Superintendent of Police Peter P. Walsh Monday for the permit. He did not receive a reply from Walsh.

Capt. Block was unable to see Walsh yesterday, and in the late afternoon announced he would have his police disperse the crowd.

Block, however, changed his mind, for when police were mobilized in the North Side station prior to the meeting, he announced they were only to preserve order while the meeting was in progress.

When questioned concerning his action, Capt. Block issued the following statement:

BLOCK'S VIEW

"On a previous occasion we prevented the Communist meeting. The law department informed magistrates that the defendants in the case were not guilty of violating a city ordinance by holding the meeting without a permit. I have decided to have a stenographer present the minutes of the meeting presented to the law department. If violations are cited in the minutes, I will make information against the speakers, and their arrests will follow."

Following the meeting, Devine issued the following statement:

"The display of force was for the purpose of intimidating workers in an effort to make a failure of the meeting. The meeting tonight was not broken up because authorities want to create illusions in the minds of workers. Regarding freedom of speech, we believe there is no such thing for workers under capitalism. The taking of notes at the meeting is part of a preparation for a drive against the Communist party, and may be used as a frameup.

"Capt. Block and his force by their courtesy very ably helped magnify any illusions about free speech which may have arisen."

SCOUTS WIN LIFE TESTS

Having passed the rigid life saving examinations of the American Red Cross, 10 scouts at Camp Twin Echo, were awarded the official emblem of the association here. Lou Demmler, of Edgewood, a qualified examiner of the Red Cross, under whose supervision the tests were held, presented the boys with the official bathing suit emblem of the junior organization, as well as badges of identification.

The tests, which were held here in the camps new $15,000 swimming pool, consisted of rescuing drowning persons, artificial respiration, and a thorough swimming examination. The scouts who won the Red Cross awards were: Bruce Danton, Richard Byrne, Arthur Jennings, William McCrory, James Forsythe and Quinton Froelich, of Wilkinsburg; James Ralston, Walter Horrocks and Oscar Cook, of Wilmerding, and Robert Haggy, of Edgewood.

While these boys were competing in the Red Cross tests, six other scouts were elevated in rank before a regular court of honor. Mrs. Blanchard, in her will, named her husband, William B. Blanchard, as sole heir, but as she died first, the intestate law becomes operative and to Mary Cathryn, the lone survivor of the family, goes the mother's property, it was said.

Mary Cathryn, herself seriously injured in the crash, was told Sunday of the death of her parents and her sister, Helen.

Two libel suits were filed in Federal Court against the packet Betsy Ann, plying out of the Pittsburgh harbor in Ohio River trade. One suit by the Ayer & Lord Tie Co., of Paducah, Ky., made a claim for $1,524, alleged balance due for supplies and repair work. The other was filed by the Enterprise Marine Dock Company, of Mount Pleasant, W. Va., with a claim of $355.41.

Attachments will be served on the boat by the United States marshal and a hearing held September 23.

WINE MAKERS HERE CHEERED

Encouraged by Prohibition Commissioner J. M. Doran's warning to dry agents not to interfere with grape shipments, Pittsburgh's myriad wine makers prepared today for the vintage of 1929.

Only two cars of grapes were received at the produce yards today, and they were table grapes; but within a few weeks, dealers estimated, wine grapes will be arriving at the rate of 100 or more cars a day.

During the wine-making season last year, 4,682 cars of grapes of all varieties were received in Pittsburgh. In 1927, receipts were 4,643 cars, and in 1926 they were 5,071 cars. The figures were obtained from J. K. Boyd, assistant marketing specialist of the United States Department of Agriculture.

At the height of the season in recent years, grapes have come in such quantities that the railroads had to declare an embargo to relieve congestion in the freight yards. But the grape crop in California, chief source of supply, is reported to be short this year.

Doran's warning was really of little more than academic interest here, for local prohibition agents have seldom interfered with home wine making. They have not checked names of grape consignees.

Bridge Proposals To Be Re-Advertised

On account of discrepancies in plans and specifications, the Elizabeth Township Board of Commissioners did not open bids at its meeting in the Municipal Building at Buena Vista for furnishing of labor and material necessary to construct a concrete bridge in Mustard Hollow as was advertised. The specifications in no way refer to the plans and call for nine eight-inch "I" beams, whereas the plans show seven beams. Other discrepancies also were cited. A motion was passed to return all bids unopened, have a complete set of plans and specifications drafted and readvertise for new bids.

The court order directs James Brown, of the Eagles; Thomas Brennen, George Betz and Thomas Regney, Moose Club, and Edward J. Bauer and Rudolph Steincer, Ambridge Hunting and Fishing Club, to show cause why the seized beer and other liquors should not be destroyed.

PORTO RICANS VISIT PITTSBURGH

SENOR CANINO SENORITA CANINO JOHN E. POTTER

Senor M. de J. Canino, Porto Rican sugar manufacturer and plantation owner, and his daughter, Ernestina, visiting with the president of Potter Title and Trust Company. Porto Ricans are patriotic Americans, they say, but Porto Rico wants statehood.

Porto Rican, Here, Urges Sugar Duty, Statehood

Porto Rico, recovering from the devastation of the hurricane of less than a year ago, feels greater reason for confidence in Uncle Sam and patriotism toward the Stars and Stripes, but the Porto Ricans want full citizenship and the privelege of a sovereign state.

Senor M. de J. Canino, sugar manufacturer from Rio Piedras, P. R., and his daughter, Ernestina, visiting in Pittsburgh at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John E. Potter, Elgin avenue, recalled how American relief committees working with the Red Cross had helped to rehabilitate the stricken areas of the island where 20 per cent of the population was rendered homeless and destitute.

"It was a magnificent example of the sympathy and generosity of the American people," said Senor Canino, "and in the disaster we were brought in closer union with this great country. Our recovery has been rapid. New homes are being built and conditions are stabilized, but we need a tariff on sugar which will protect our planters from competition from Cuba, Santo Domingo and other countries. We claim this protection as a heritage of the United States, and a commission from Porto Rico has won the promise of President Hoover that our cause will have attention in the next Congress."

A still greater boon to the Porto Ricans, he said, would be the granting of statehood to the island. At this black eyes of his daughter sparkled as she added:

"We love the American flag—every one of its beautiful stars—but there should be another star in the banner representing our golden island. Then our people would be extremely happy and we would elect our own governor and have a voice in the government."

Dad Says

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., Aug. 8.

Our big problem is this discontent in our prisons. Hardly a day passes that prisoners don't show some little outward sign of uneasiness, such as shooting a few guards, burning some buildings, and giving some hint publicly that they want to participate in this era of prosperity through which we are struggling to keep to make both ends meet.

It just looks like the boys in there don't appreciate how fortunate they are, to have no installment payments to meet. The next political campaign is liable to be based on "bigger and better jails, for bigger and better prisoners, a satisfied prisoner means a satisfied nation."

Personally, I would like to see 'em all turned out, as I have always felt we had the wrong bunch in there.

Yours, WILL.

The weekly meetings of the Lions Club of Mt. Lebanon which were discontinued for the summer months, were resumed last night at the regular meeting place, in the Mt. Lebanon Presbyterian Church, Castle Shannon and Washington roads. President Edward B. Goldsmith presided.

Mr. Price invited the club as a whole, to be guests of the Boy Scouts at Camp Umpstetter next Wednesday night. The club accepted the invitation and will hold their regular weekly meeting at the camp. It is arranged that the members will travel in motor buses, leaving Mt. Lebanon at 5 p. m. and picking up the members who have their business in the city at 5:30. The Lions will witness the Indian dance of the Scouts and other entertainment which will take place. T. W. Stevenson will appoint a committee to arrange for the buses.

BOYS BOMBARD TROLLEY CAR

Passengers on a late Brookline trolley car were endangered last night when a number of boys, massed on a bank near Fleming stop, bombarded the car with rocks. One or more of the stones penetrated to the inside and a woman passenger was hit, but not seriously injured. The matter has been reported and the railways company co-operating with the police will endeavor to ferret out the miscreants.

Cars on the Brookline branch recently have been subjected to a barrage of stones. These acts have been perpetrated at night when the trolley crew is unable to detect those committing the attack. Thus far no person has been injured, but the cars, especially the windows, have been more or less damaged.

Miner's Bowery Theater Burns

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—(INS.)—Miner's Old Bowery Theater was reduced to a pile of smoking debris today when fire finished the wrecking job it began on March 18. It was one of the most spectacular downtown blazes in many months.

Before the fire, fought from elevated tracks, roofs and fire-escapes, was under control, more than 1,000 persons were forced to the streets.

Two policemen and one fireman were injured.

Evidence of incendiary origin was found.

In the old days such stars as Weber and Fields, Maggie Cline, Helen Mora and the Russell Brothers played the theater.

DENIES WILL SLIGHTED HIM

James B. Cotts, 2701 Perrysville avenue, denied today he had been cut off with $1 in the will of his father, William J. Cotts, as reported in a Wheeling (W. Va.) dispatch.

He said he shared equally with four brothers and sisters in the estate. Another child, Andrew W. Cotts, is left only $1, he said, but he has not been heard from for 12 years, and there is uncertainty as to whether he is still alive.

Later dispatches from Wheeling bore out Mr. Cotts' statement.

To counteract further any impression that may have gone abroad that his father had lost confidence in him, James B. Cotts stated that he had been named an administrator of the will.

William J. Cotts, Wheeling business man, died several months ago, aged 90.

ONE CONSTABLE GETS JOB, 3 WAITING

Candidates Vie for Ross Appointment; Roadhouse Ownership Probed

"Do you own a roadhouse?" Assistant District Attorney Andrew T. Park asked Anthony Huber, candidate for the constable's appointment in Ross Township, in Quarter Sessions Court today.

"No," Huber answered," I used to own an eating place, but I sold it."

James Crouse also was a candidate for the vacancy. Judge Harry H. Rowand postponed decision and instructed Detective Chief George W. Murren to investigate both men's records.

From four hearings came one appointment and three postponements. Thomas R. Bennett was named constable of Hampton Township to succeed Howard DeTrude.

Frank J. Kovacs, of Aleppo Township, asked to be appointed constable as successor to Raymond Bengle, who is serving a penitentiary sentence on a charge of extortion.

Carl F. Hildebrand asked for the job in Reserve Township, citing the failure of the elected Adam Broglie to qualify. In both cases Judge Rowand set August 15 for hearing.

Pat Crowe Urges Alaska Exile as Crime Cure

An elderly man, white-haired, mild-mannered, strolled into the Sun-Telegraph office today with a new plan for dealing with habitual criminals. Prison riots, prominent in the news lately, could be prevented, he said, by exiling confirmed malefactors to Alaska.

The visitor showed he knew something about crime and criminals—for he proved to be Pat Crowe, in his youth one of the country's foremost train robbers, bandits and desperadoes. In 1900 a reward of $50,000 was offered for his capture, dead or alive. That was just after he kidnaped Edward A. Cudahy, son of the millionaire meat packer, and forced the father to pay $25,000 for his release.

Crowe, now 60, has been devoting himself of late years to lecturing and writing on crime and punishment. He is in Pittsburgh on that mission.

"Let habitual criminals be kept under constant restraint and surveillance," he said, "but not in prisons. Let them be sent to Alaska to develop that country's resources. Let them live in colonies like the Russian penal colonies in Siberia. Let them have their wives and children with them.

"Escape would be impossible. They would no longer be a menace to society. And they would develop a country whose development is now being retarded by lack of labor."

Crowe said he would lay his plan before President Hoover's crime commission.

Vang announced that 200 men already are engaged in grading the field, using 16 big steam shovels, 34 trucks and three drilling machines.

Diplomat Lets Chauffeur Pay Speed Fine

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—(AP.)—A chauffeur for the Persian Legation paid a $10 fine for speeding because the Persian minister, Mirza Davoud Khan Teftah, notified the police judge he would not claim diplomatic immunity for the driver.

George H. Brown, the chauffeur, was using the Legation automobile without permission when arrested, the minister said. Later he told reporters that "attaches of this legation will not be permitted to violate at will the traffic regulations and then escape punishment under the cloak of this international courtesy."

Fifteen passengers in an Indianapolis-bound Greyhound Line bus had narrow escapes last night when the bus was destroyed by fire on Scott's Hill, Washington road, Mt. Lebanon. The loss was estimated at $15,000 by police.

H. C. Vance, 915 Manchester boulevard, driver, made a quick stop and aided the passengers, some of them women, to escape. All baggage was saved.

While Vance fought the flames with a fire extinguisher one of the passengers called the Mt. Lebanon fire department, but the fire had gained such headway that the bus was destroyed.

Traffic in Washington road was tied up more than 30 minutes.

Dam of Beavers Threatens Road

FRANKLIN, Pa., Aug. 8.—A beaver dam in construction all summer along the banks of Mill creek, near the Clarion-Venango county line, is proving a problem for highway officials. The dam has resulted in backing up water during rainy seasons and inundating the highway.

One of the dams is 30 feet across, and the water is backed up for a quarter of a mile. The dam is near the Vern Ashbaugh farm. Some of the trees which the beavers have felled are 15 feet from the bank.

SPOUSE KILLED, $50,000 ASKED

Suit for $50,000 damages because of the death of her husband in an automobile crash is on file today in Common Pleas Court, instituted by Mrs. May Gibson, 1909 Laurel street, against Michael Hoskovic, of Eckert street. When the suit was filed by Attorney W. J. Connelly Judge Harry H. Rowan fixed capias bail of $1,000 to restrain Hoskovic from leaving the jurisdiction of the court.

The widow alleges that her husband, Joseph B. Gibson, was killed June 21 at Davis street and McClure avenue, when the automobile in which he was riding was struck by a truck driven at an excessive rate of speed on the wrong side of the street by Hoskovic, whom she alleges was under the influence of liquor. DUNN, BOOMED BY DEMOCRATS

Former United States District Attorney E. Lowry Humes, chairman, last night presented to the Democratic Committee of One Hundred the name of Thomas A. Dunn as the party's candidate for mayor.

In his address he declared that "Pittsburgh is infested with a political machine which is controlled and dominated by selfish financial and commercial influences that seek to hold both city and state as hostages for the promotion of their selfish purposes."

The committee accepted Dunn, for many years active in Democratic affairs. He is general manager of the Consolidated Ice Company, a native of Pittsburgh, and a resident of the Fifth Ward. He is the first nominee for mayor on the Democratic ticket.

Athletic Field Fight Echoed in Politics

Echoes of the controversy over use of the Bellevue High School Athletic Field for Fourth of July baseball are being heard in the liveliest race for school director in the borough annals.

Five candidates have announced for the three vacancies, and others are said to be pending.

THREE TERMS EXPIRE

The terms of George W. Judd, president; James H. Campbell, treasurer, and J. C. Denslow expire at the close of this year and their successors will be nominated at the September primaries. Judd and Campbell are candidates for renomination. Denslow is not running, as he says he has not the time to spare for the numerous meetings which have been necessary in the past year.

Harry A. Yerx is said to be leading the opposition to the present members on the ground that the High School field should have been granted on the Fourth for baseball. The School Board granted use of the field, they announced, but required that a wire netting be put up to protect adjacent property and pedestrians. The Board of Trade refused to accept this proviso, and Bellevue had no Independence Day celebration.

WOMAN MAY RUN

Yerx will have a running mate, it is said, but his identity has not been disclosed.

Also in the race are Richard D. Jenkinson, real estate broker, and S. Frank McKee. Friends of Mrs. I. D. Johnston, formerly president of the School Board, circulated a nominating petition in her behalf during her absence from the borough. She said today she had not definitely decided whether she would enter the race, but her friends say her candidacy is probable.

Several others have been requested to become candiates, but thus far have withheld formal announcement.

PATRICIA PITT'S SPRIGHTLY COMMENT ON PITTSBURGH'S SOCIETY HAPPENINGS

Mary Elizabeth Floyd To Be Honor Guest At Dinner Dance

AUGUST date-books are notorious for their sheer emptiness—but just take a glance ahead a month or two. Even now there is scarcely a page free from notations about one party or another—and frequently there are several. Parents suddenly deciding to launch a daughter into the social world this coming winter are likely to find the way extremely difficult. Dates have been taken for such a long time—and so many of them—that the potential debutante might find it impossible to fit a coming-out party into the calendar.

This year, more than ever before, our hostesses are finding it convenient to announce their dates far in advance, and so make sure of the evening. I've told you the dates for most of the big balls, but every day or so I hear about a party for a debutante. Added to this list is the dinner dance which Miss Edna Woods Sutton, of Fifth avenue, is planning for December 19 in the Pittsburgh Golf Club. Miss Sutton's guest of honor will be Mary Elizabeth Floyd, daughter of Mrs. Thomas Atterbury McGinley, of North Lincoln avenue, North Side and Sewickley Heights, who is scheduled to make her bow at a tea on November 19.

This dinner, of course, precedes the ball which the George Hubbard Clapps, of Sewickley, are going to give that night in the Pittsburgh Club in honor of their debutante granddaughter, Katherine Collin.

I HEAR that an engagement which was announced in June is to terminate in a wedding late this month. Barbara Talbot-Peterson, daughter of the H. Talbot-Petersons, of Hobart street, has selected August 31 as the date for her marriage to Abram Evan Gwynne, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Abram E. Gwynne, of New York. And the ceremony will be performed in New York where Miss Talbot-Peterson has been living.

JOINING the travelers are Col. and Mrs. Samuel Harden Church, of Wallingford street, who will sail tomorrow at midnight on the Olympic for a short trip abroad.

Also away from home are the Frank W. Severances and their son, Frank W. Severance, Jr., of Beaver and Campmeeting roads, Leetsdale. They are in Beaumaris, Canada, as guests of Mrs. Severance's parents, the John Walkers, at their summer home.

I hear, too, that Mrs. Robert D. Totten has joined Mrs. J. B. Laughlin for a few days at the Barclay Hotel, New York.

MR. AND MRS. WILLIAM N. SAUER, of Valmont street, Squirrel Hill, and their granddaughter, Miss Anne and Miss Mary Steitz, left last week for Lake Placid, where they will remain until early in September. Their grandson, William N. Steitz, will join them there.

YESTERDAY morning in Corpus Christi Catholic Church, the marriage of Miss Helen McCutcheon, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles McCutcheon, of Verona boulevard, and Peter G. Lersch, Jr., of Verona boulevard, was solemnized by the Rev. John Bean. The bride wore ivory satin with a tulle veil and carried a shower of white roses and lilies of the valley. The bridesmaids were Miss Erma Lersch, sister of the bridegroom, appearing in chartreuse green chiffon with a hat to match, and Miss Margaret Martin, in pink chiffon with hat to match. They carried roses. Mr. Lersch had Charles McCutcheon, brother of the bride, and Herman Rosemeyer for his attendants. A breakfast at the Rittenhouse followed the ceremony and later Mr. and Mrs. Lersch left for an Eastern motor trip.

ANNOUNCEMENT has been made of the engagement of Miss Muriel Thompson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Turner Thompson, of "Fairwater," Princeton, N. J., to John Scott Easton, son of Dr. John Shotwell Easton, of Denniston avenue. No wedding date has been set. Mr. Easton attended Princeton University.

THE marriage of Miss Dorothea Julia McKee, daughter of Mrs. Mary E. McKee and the late E. Boyles McKee, of McDonald, and Norman F. Hoelzle, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick J. Hoelzle, of Sharon, was solemnized yesterday morning in the parsonage of the First United Presbyterian Church of Mt. Washington by the Rev. Albert A. Love. After a trip to Canada and the White Mountains, Mr. and Mrs. Hoelzle will be at home in Schley avenue, Ingram. The bride is a graduate of the Indiana Teachers' College and Mr. Hoelzle was graduated from Westminster College. He is a member of the Theta Epsilon Omega fraternity.

MR. AND MRS. W. C. GRAHAM and their family, of the William Penn highway, Wilkinsburg, are spending some time at the Piney Mountain Inn, near Gettysburg.

CHURCH ISSUE STIRS BURKE

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—(AP.)—James Francis Burke, general counsel of the Republican National committee, denied that during the presidential campaign last year he "urged or suggested" that Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt, former assistant attorney general incharge of prohibition, "discuss any man's religion or any religious subject."

Mr. Burke's denial was made in reply to statements of Mrs. Willebrandt in newspaper articles copyrighted by current news features.

"Ordinarily I pay no attention," Mr. Burke said, "to campaign canards but in the interest of truth and all concerned I am compelled to deny that during the last presidential campaign I ever urged or suggested that Mrs. Willebrandt discuss any man's religion or any religious subject, nor did I ever insert or attempt to insert any religious comment in any speech she made or intended to make nor was any manuscript of hers containing any attack on any man's religion or personel character or raising the religious issue ever submitted to or scrutinized by me, nor did any manuscript of her Springfield (Ohio) speech which came to headquarters contain any such expression as 'go back to your pulpits and preach this doctrine,' or anything akin to it."

Mrs. Willebrandt declared in one of her articles that the day before her Springfield speech was delivered every word of it was carefully edited by Mr. Burke.

NAME I'M ALONE ARBITRATORS

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—(AP.)—Justice Willis Van Devanter, of the United States Supreme Court, has been designated by Secretary Stimson as the American member of the commission which will arbitrate the case of the sinking of the Canadian rum-runner, I'm Alone, by the coast guard vessel, Dexter, last March in the Gulf of Mexico.

The State Department also announced the appointment of George Wharton Pepper, former United States senator from Pennsylvania, as the agent to represent the United States before the commission.

The Canadian government has designated as its member of the commission, Eugene Lafleur, K. C., of Montreal, and John E. Read, legal adviser of the Canadian Department of External Affairs, as agent. W. N. Tilley, K. C., of Toronto, and Aime Geoffrion, of Montreal, will serve with Mr. Read as Canadian counsels.

The commissioners will determine the time and place of the hearings on the case.

DEBT HARMONY SOUGHT

THE HAGUE, Aug. 8.—(AP.)—Conflicting viewpoints on the Young reparations plan were submitted today to two committees in secret session with the hope that reconciliation might be achieved.

The two committees were those appointed yesterday, one headed by Baron Houtart, Belgian finance minister, to study the financial questions involved in the Young plan, and the other by Arthur Henderson, British foreign minister, to study political consequences of its adoption.

STUDY STATEMENTS

In beginning their work, the two committees had before them statements of Philip Snowden, British chancellor of the exchequer, in opposition to the plan, and of Henri Cheron, French finance minister, and Senator Antoni Mosconi, of Italy, favoring adoption without alteration.

Other viewpoints also have been expressed by Gustav Stresemann, German foreign minister, and spokesman for the smaller interested states, the various modifications of opposition and favoritism involved dividing the conference into almost as many camps as nations are represented.

Many felt today that the duration of the conference depends upon how long the British Labor minister would stand out against his fellow conferees in the political and financial committees.

ALLIES IN DISCORD

In many ways the most notable attribute of the situation was that all the discord seemed to be among the former allies, with Germany far removed from the discussion.

In the appointment of two committees for simultaneous discussion of political and financial aspects of the Young plan, the German foreign minister seemed to have gained a point from the French, who heretofore had insisted discussion of the political phases should not take place until financial angles had been cleared. There seemed little doubt that Dr. Stresemann would take the earliest opportunity to introduce evacuation of the Rhineland and a revised status in the Saar basin into the deliberations.

The financial committee headed by Baron Houtart is composed of two delegates from each of the 12 countries represented at the conference, a reprsentation which will allow the smaller countries a chance to make their claims heard. The political committee is made up of two delegates from each of the six main powers, Great Britain, France, Belgium, Italy, Japan and Germany.

Is there an August Sale of Furs at Grabowsky's?

IF THAT refers to what is usually understood as an August Fur Sale, with its promises of large discounts from regular prices, then the answer is emphatically "NO!"

On the other hand, if the question means: "Is this store ready with the new fur styles for 1930?", the answer is just as emphatic: "YES!"

Months ago, the pelts were purchased. Not only were worth-while economies effected, but the very finest skins were chosen. The designing staff has been at work ... many models have been brought from abroad ... reproduced and adapted ... developed with the customary skill for which this store is so widely known. The collection of fur coats now assembled is truly magnificent.

There's only one way to determine fur values. Compare! We believe that our fur coats, at the present prices, represent the best values in Pittsburgh.

SLIM! Stylish! Chic! Laura was stunning in her lovely, new frock.

But what did it avail her? Men admired Laura's smartness—but they avoided her company. Women openly envied her beauty, but secretly pitied her.

Yes—another case of "B.O."—Body Odor! And Laura never suspected it until a newspaper ad aroused her suspicions. "B.O." isn't hurting Laura any longer. She keeps perspiration odorless now—easily, too!

Now—no fear of "B.O."

We can't always tell when we're guilty of "B.O." We become insensitive to ever-present odors. But pores give off as much as a quart of odor-causing waste daily. And the hotter the weather—the more danger.

It's best to play safe—always! Just bathe regularly with Lifebuoy, the deodorizing toilet soap that millions use. Refreshing, invigorating, marvelously cleansing, its gentle antiseptic lather is like a tonic. Pores are purified so deeply that "B.O." stays away.

DAILY SHORT STORY

TENDERFOOT JIM

By H. LOUIS RAYBOLD

JIM, drenched to the skin from flying spray, succeeded in bringing in his dory load of salmon from the float anchored beyond the surf that broke in smashing showers on the rocks that fringed the Alaskan shore.

Every muscle in his arms, back, neck and legs ached cruelly for in those mighty seas one had to row with all one's body.

Yet each pull that he had given had sent a thrill of exultation through him, for wasn't it bringing him that much nearer release and home—and Evelyn (who, if he didn't get back to her pretty soon, would probably marry somebody else)?

Jim had come West in a spirit of adventure and with no money to speak of. He had reached Vancouver ready to sign on for anything. What he did sign up for after a few days of tightening his belt and dreaming of meals back home, was a deckhand's job on a passenger boat making the inside voyage to Alaska.

The next step had landed him where he was now. One of the outside help in a salmon factory. To his companions, husky Swedes for the most part, he immediately became known as the "Tenderfoot." In all sorts of ways they plagued him. Made him feel an alien. Used him as the butt of their crude jokes.

Stolidly, however, Jim stuck, resolved to stay until he had saved enough money to go home. His wanderlust had been satisfied. That which had once seemed too humdrum to contemplate—marrying Evelyn, the girl next door, and settling down to a bank clerk's job—had come to appeal to him as the sum of human happiness.

So he continued to work for hours in bitter winds icy with the breath of glaciers upon them, soaked with the sea, nostrils sickened with the smell of salmon, salmon and yet more salmon.

Now, thank God, he was through. His wages, to be paid tonight, would carry him home.

Out of all the men with whom he had been associated, one had come to be his friend. This was Adolph Mattson, a sturdy Swede, who had frequently taken Jim's part against his fellows. Jim's affection, begun out of sheer gratitude, had strengthened out of actual liking.

Once they had climbed a nearby mountain together, crawling up far beyond the timber line in daring that was more foolhardy than commendable. Jim, on his way down, had slipped over a ledge and, unable to get a foothold or handhold on grass made smooth by melting snow, had started to slide straight downward to certain death.

Adolph, some distance below, had stepped quickly into his path, braced himself, and caught Jim in his arms without losing his balance, a feat remarkable enough to have merited an audience.

From that moment they had been greater friends than ever, and Jim's only regret in giving up his job lay in the fact that probably never again would he see Adolph.

Adolph had responsibilities. A wife and two babies in the village of Benton, whose thumbed pictures he had unwrapped from a protective bit of oilskin and shown boastfully to Jim. Jim knew it was the thought of them that gave him courage to fight the wicked seas when he alternated with Jim in getting the dory back and forth between cliff and float.

Tonight, Jim stepped ashore from his last trip, drew up the dory by cable to lift it above the reach of the waves, and climbed slowly to the tent on top of the cliff which he shared with Adolph.

Slowly he drew off his thigh-reaching rubber boots and coarse stockings. Briskly he rubbed his feet from which all feeling had long since departed. As he did so, he found himself whistling a little song he and Evelyn had once sung together in their grammar school glee club.

"Don't call me from my slumbers
As I dream of happy hours—"

Suddenly, he became aware that Adolph was standing in the tent doorway with so strange an expression on his face that Jim was startled.

"Why, what—" he began.

"My kids—" said Adolph, and sat down on the edge of the cot with the big hands dropped forlornly between his knees. "I bane afraid. A fellow what come say dip'teria at my town and all the children very seeck. Maybe not mine—but I don't know. I want to go home—but how can I go home?"

"Just go," said Jim. "Nobody can stop you."

"No," said Adolph. "Nobody can stop me. But the boss say you going and nobody else but me to ron the boat. Eef I go, I get no pay at all. And I got to have my pay for the kids and Minna. The boss laugh because maybe my kids aren't seeck anyhow. But I got to find out."

Jim's thoughts were in a whirl. Poor Adolph! Hadn't he, Jim, known what it was to be homesick for a girl that, when at home, he hadn't even cared much about? Suppose that Evelyn were his wife and there were children.

"See here, Adolph, I've got it," he said suddenly. "I'm paid off. You go on home and I'll let you have my pay. Then I'll go to the boss and explain. He'll have to come across with yours. Get a move on if you're going tonight."

Adolph made a weak gesture of refusal which Jim ignored. "You sure you fix it O. K.?" he said wistfully, when he stood ready to go, his few belongings tied in a red handkerchief.

"Get along, you old bum!" and Jim gave him an affectionate push out of the tent.

But after Adolph had gone, Jim stood for a long time staring down over the cliff at the white lipped water curling over the rocks, at the dory hauled on its cable waiting for the morrow, then out at the float riding the swell of the bay.

He knew the utter absurdity of going to the boss with any such tale as the simple truth would be. With Adolph gone the need for him to man the dory would be all the greater. No, he must start again and save. Tomorrow he would be once more at the oars. And tomorrow. And tomorrow.

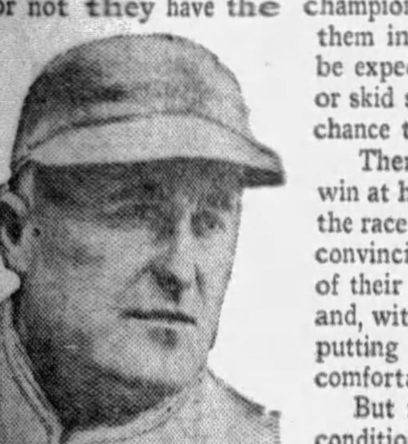
Bruins Face Real Test. Stake Chance on Trip. Intersectional Series. | P. Waner Returns Soon. Chicago Gates Padded. Odd A. A. U. Verdict.

CUBS ON ROAD IN 26 OF 31 GAMES

NOW comes the real test that will determine where the National League pennant of 1929 is going to fly. The Cubs hit the road tomorrow for a tough trip that will show whether or not they have the championship qualities required to keep them in first place; whether they may be expected to stay there until the end or skid sufficiently to give the Pirates a chance to pass them.



Joe McCarthy.

There is no denying their ability to win at home. That was conceded when the race began, and they have just given convincing evidence of it by winning 14 of their last 16 games on their own lot and, with the aid of Pittsburgh's slump, putting themselves out in front by the comfortable margin of seven games.

But now there is to be a change in conditions that may tell a different story. Of their next 31 games, Joe McCarthy's league leaders must play no fewer than 26 away from home—16 in the East, starting tomorrow, two in Cincinnati, five in Pittsburgh and three in St. Louis. Their only home engagements between now and September 7 will be two with Cincinnati and three with St. Louis.

THAT strenuous stretch of schedule probably will either break the Bruins or establish them so firmly in first place that it will be impossible for any rival to oust them. The next three weeks ought to go far toward deciding the fight.

Pittsburgh's chance will hinge on the possibility of a Chicago slump. The Bucs have proved themselves a better road club than the Cubs, and probably will surpass them again in the East with Grimes and Grantham back on the job.

BUT a reasonable winning gait by the locals will not suffice to carry them to the top again unless the present leaders lose eight games more than the Bushmen between now and the closing date.

The main hope centers around the chance that the Cubs will slip back far enough in the meantime to make it possible for the Corsairs to draw near to them by knocking them for about four out of five in the big series here on the last four days in August.

Grover Alexander.

STOPPING a long winning streak that the Pirates have enjoyed at the expense of the Cardinals, besides trying to direct Grover Alexander to a new lifetime National league pitching record of 373 victories—Alex tied Mathewson's mark of 372 wins last week—was one of the tasks confronting Bill McKechnie in the two-game series opening today, in his first appearance here since he was reappointed manager of the St. Louis outfit.

THE Rovers have grabbed 11 out of 13 games played with the Missourians this season, not counting one tie, and surpassed even Chicago's record against Brooklyn by defeating St. Louis 10 times in succession up to today. The Cards have not won a game from Pittsburgh since May 16, and even then they had to fight 10 innings for it. The score was 10 to 9.

In the meantime, as stated, the Pirates have bagged 10 in a row from the Mound City ballers. Kremer, Brame and Fussell won two decisions each, and Grimes, Meine, Petty and French one each. Though credited with only one victory, Grimes saved two other games in one afternoon.

PITTSBURGH was the only Western club failing to win more games than it lost in the National League's intersectional series that ended with yesterday's tilt at Forbes Field. The West took the honors, 39 games to 22. The Pirates won only five games from the Eastern invaders and lost nine; the Cubs won 14 and lost two; the Cards won 10 and lost five, and the Reds won 10 and lost six.

Of the Eastern teams, the Giants won seven and lost the same number; the Braves won six and lost nine; the Robins won five and lost 12, and the Phillies won four and lost 11. Three of the Phils' four victories on the trip were scored over the Pirates. The Bucs did not win a series during the home stay, the closest approach being an even break in four games with Boston. They lost two out of three to Brooklyn, three out of four to Philadelphia, and two out of three to New York.

Joe Dawson.

IN THE American League's latest intersectional series, the edge went to the East, 29 games to 22. The Athletics won 11 and lost four, the Yankees won eight and lost three, the Red Sox won five and lost seven, and the Senators won five and lost eight. The Indians led the Western clubs with nine victories and five defeats. The White Sox won five and lost seven; the Tigers won four and lost eight, and the Browns won four and lost nine.

JOE DAWSON, former Pirate pitcher, was a spectator at yesterday's Forbes Field bout. He says he has had no occasion to regret his decision not to report to Baltimore when the Bucs released him to that club, and that he is out of baseball for good. Yesterday's game was only the third that he has witnessed since he was released on June 8.

Joe declares that he has found aviation a much more attractive and profitable field than baseball. Recently he received an offer of $750 per month and expenses to go to South America and demonstrate a certain make of airplanes in the Argentine, but declined it in order to give all his attention to his growing fl[illegible] school here. Dawson has decided to locate here permanently. Only two aviation schools in the country have more flying students than Joe is instructing at Bettis Field.

PAUL WANER'S present experience of being benched on account of a batting slump is not his first of the kind since he became a Pirate. While Bill McKechnie was manager of the Bucs in 1926 he took Paul out of the lineup to give him a rest when the new Buc wasn't going very well.

"And that rest did me a world of good," said Paul yesterday. "So will the present one. Probably it is just what I need, and I feel sure that I'll be all the better for it." Manager Bush says he plans to put the elder Waner back in right field in a day or two.

THE year's big attendance figures at the Cubs' park evidently have gone to the heads of some of the critics and club officials in Chicago. They're seeing double. First reports of Tuesday's game with Brooklyn stated that 65,000 persons had attended the contest, and later news dispatches set the total attendance at 50,000. In both instances the figures were absurdly exaggerated. The park will not hold 50,000, to say nothing of 65,000. A business official of a club that played here recently said that when his team was playing in Chicago the crowd was so large that it overflowed onto the field and forced the closing of the gates with thousands left outside. "The tickets sold totaled 46,000," he said, "and we had to refund the money on 500 of

CHAMP LONE LOCAL ENTRY TO QUALIFY

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 8.—(AP.)—Prospects of ending the two-year-old reign of Carl T. Kuaffmann, the golfing Pittsburgh secretary, as champion of all National public links iron wielders were not so bright today.

Without much ado or effort, the champion demonstrated he was on edge to defend his crown in the 36-hole qualifying test by combining two rounds of 77-74 for a 151 total, which gave him a tie for the tournament medal with two comparative unknowns—Patsy Tiso, a 19-year-old student from New York, and Milton Soncrant, a Toledo mailman.

CARL STEADY

Kauffmann's rounds were the steadiest of the record field of 140 which attempted to qualify. He was consistent with all his shots and looked even a better golfer than he did during the past two tournaments when he won and then successfully defended his title. Virtually all of his 31 rivals in the championship bracket were untried quantities in the event too, and it looked like a difficult task to stop him.

Forest Park, the championship course, was a jinx for most of the entrants. Long, rugged and spliced everywhere by trees and waterholes, it was so difficult that a total of 159 strokes, 15 more than par, were good enough to gain a berth in the championship fight.

The cards of the leaders follow:

Kauffmann—
Out .. 5 2 2 5 6 4 5 4 6—39
In ... 3 5 3 3 5 4 5 4 4—35—74—77—151

Tiso—
Out .. 5 3 3 6 5 3 4 5 5—39
In ... 4 6 4 5 4 4 4 4 4—39—78—73—151

Soncrant—
Out .. 4 4 2 5 4 3 4 4 5—35
In ... 3 6 3 6 5 3 4 4 4—38—73—78—151

Eight who turned in 160 totals, fought it out in a play-off for three places, filling the bracket. The survivors represented 16 cities in 13 states. St. Louis, New York and Louisville, Ky., led the cities with four entrants each out of a possible six. Other cities and the number of their championship hopes were: Chicago 3; St. Paul 3; Buffalo 2; Toledo 2; Detroit 2; and Baltimore, Topeka, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Brooklyn, Cleveland, San Francisco and New Haven, Conn., one each.

PLAYS CHICAGOAN

Kaufmann's first opponent in the initial 18-hole match play round today was R. H. Albeck, of Chicago, who squeezed into the championship flight in the playoff. Tiso's rival was James McAuliffe, Buffalo, who qualified with a 159, and Soncrant faced A. J. Pardee, of New Haven, whose 155 qualified him easily for the championship struggle.

Other matches brought together these survivors:

Upper bracket: Ernest Caldwell, Baltimore, and John Hornsby, Topeka; Dr. Iri R. Davies, St. Louis, and Gus Fetz, Chicago; Gordon Denney, Louisville, and Harold Cook, Toledo; Michael Friedlein, St. Louis, and Cooney Schaber, Louisville; John Boyd, Philadelphia, and Al Priebe, St. Paul; Henry Fabrizio, of Brooklyn, who topped the first round with a 70, and John Conway, Detroit.

Lower bracket: Sterling Dawson, Chicago, and Mortimer Jaffe, New York; Togo Hamamoto, St. Louis, and Joe Tesar, Cleveland; Connell Kersey, Louisville, and Charles Ferrera, San Francisco; Ade Fordham, St. Paul, and Wesley Casper, Louisville; Jerry Standford, St. Louis, and Joe Amerol, New York; Frank Connolly, Detroit, and Guy McCall, Buffalo, and Joseph Farrell, New York, against Frank Brokl, St. Paul.

GRAHAM NOSED OUT

Togo Hamamoto, the Japanese butler from St. Louis; Ade Fordham, of St. Paul, and P. H. Albeck, of Chicago, won the playoff for the extra three places in the championship bracket. The defeated ones were H. E. Hubbard, Jacksonville, Fla.; John Seigries, Elizabeth, N. J.; Bob Graham, Pittsburgh; John Cunniffee, Newark, N. J., and Charles Kocsis, of Detroit.

LOSE HARDING CUP

Golfers from Louisville and New York tied for the Warren G. Harding trophy, emblem of the national public links team championship, each squad ending the 36-hole medal play with 630 strokes. They will battle for the cup either Saturday or Sunday. St. Paul, Minn., was next with 639. Other teams landed as follows: St. Louis, 641; Pittsburgh, holder of the cup for the Having positive designs on third place and feeling they still have better than a mathematical chance for a higher berth, the Cardinals, under Bill McKechnie, are in Pittsburgh today looking for trouble. The Redbirds are booked for battles with the Pirates this afternoon and tomorrow. Ervin Brame or Larry French will work for the Buccos with Grover Alexander or Harold Haid operating for the invaders. Paul Waner may play first if a righthander pitches.

The clash of tomorrow will mark the finale of the Buccos until late in the month, the Bushwhackers to leave tomorrow night for the East on their last eastern invasion.

Skipper Bill, who recently returned from his Rochester charge to resume leadership over the Cards, reached Pittsburgh ahead of his team. The Wilkinsburg citizen was among those in attendance at Forbes Field yesterday afternoon when the Buccos defeated the Giants, 4 to 3, in an exciting diamond scrap.

BILL BOOSTS TEAM

McKechnie returned to the Redbirds to find them in a wobbly condition and below the .550 mark. Bill already has the St. Louisans three games above that margin of mediocrity and if he can get his pitchers back to the form they displayed one year ago he will be apt to make all kinds of trouble for the higher-ups.

With Bottomley, Hafey, Frisch, High and others swinging mean bats, Skipper Bill can show the fans one of the best offensives in the

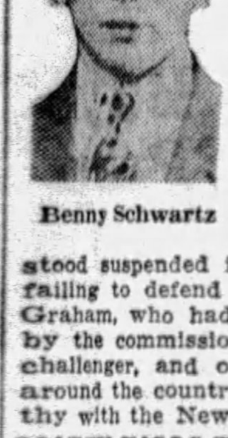
SCHWARTZ ONCE SLATED FOR CROWN

By HARRY KECK, Sports Editor.

It is not generally known, but Benny Schwartz, of Baltimore, who meets Bushy Graham, of Utica, N. Y., former claimant of the bantamweight title, in the 10-round main bout at the Meyers Bowl, North Braddock, next Monday night, once was slated to succeed Charley (Phil) Rosenberg, of New York, to that crown. A little thing like temperament interfered with the fulfillment of the plans of his manager, Eddie Mead, then of New York and now of Cleveland.

Mead recently related the story during a trip to Pittsburgh, shortly after Schwartz had taken the town by the ears with his sparkling boxing victory over Jackie Rodgers in a 10-round bout at the Bridgeville Speedway.



Benny Schwartz

It all happened at the time Rosenberg was in the bad graces of boxing commissions almost everywhere. He stood suspended in New York for failing to defend his title against Graham, who had been designated by the commission as the leading challenger, and other commissions around the country were in sympathy with the New York board.

MATCH FALLS THROUGH

Schwartz had only recently come under the management of Mead, who had piloted Joe Lynch to the bantamweight championship. He made several impressive fights in New York and Mead went to Champ Segal, manager of Rosenberg, one of his friends, and asked him to give Benny a crack at the title.

"You're not getting anywhere with Phil," he said. "He's having trouble making the weight and is being kicked around. Why not give me a break? I can put in a match between Rosenberg and Schwartz in Baltimore, Benny's home town, where he recently gave Pancho Villa a tough 15-round fight, and we can draw a fine gate. Benny can win the decision down there and we'll all make some money and keep the title in the family. What do you say?"

Segal took some time to think the matter over and then told Mead to build up Benny a little more and the match would be on.

Before the thing could be fully arranged, Schwartz and Mead disagreed violently on several matters and Mead finally reasoned it out that if he couldn't get along amiably with his fighter before he won the title life probably wouldn't be worth living with him if he ever became a champion, so the deal was called off. Shortly afterward he sold Schwartz's contract to Phil Glassman, of Philadelphia, and Benny remained with the manager of Lew Tendler for only about a half-dozen fights and then began to free lance. Since then he has had several managers, including Uncle Bob Levy, who handled the late Battling Siki during the latter's career in this country.

COUP TRICKS GRAHAM

Schwartz is a thoroughly seasoned boxer and a clever one. In looks and action he appears to be a small edition of Benny Leonard, former lightweight champion. He is picking on anything but a soft one in meeting Graham, who, strangely enough, finally got his long-awaited crack at Rosenberg, but failed to gain title recognition when the latter came in overweight and won the decision over him. Bushy always contended, and rightly so, that he should have been automatically declared the champion when he made the weight for his championship match and Rosenberg tricked him by coming in as a featherweight. The coup cost Rosenberg a year's suspension and practically ended his career as a topnotch boxer.

Battling Battalino, the Italian sensation of Hartford, Conn., who recently defeated Al Brown, newly-crowned bantamweight champion, and next meets Andy Martin, of Boston, at Hartford, won the National amateur featherweight championship two years ago and

Bambino Steals All Glory in Big Six

For the second straight day, Babe Ruth took unto himself all the glory that was gained yesterday by the Big Six clouters of the major leagues, although he failed to add a point to his batting average. Jimmy Foxx lost three points by failing to hit in the doubleheader with the Yanks, where the Babe hit a homer with the bases full and hit safely twice in six tries. Manush, Hornsby and P. Waner were idle, Mel Ott failed to hit in three times at bat. The standing:

CLARKE CLAIMS ERROR GIVEN BARTELL

The two kids forming the slick keystone combination for the Pirates offer a Damon and Pythias touch that serves as a refreshing breeze, inasmuch as there is selfishness in baseball players just as there is in the rest of us.

In Tuesday's game, Dick Bartell was charged with an error when second base was left uncovered on a Hargreaves throw. The scoring rules instruct the official scorer to charge a misplay to the infielder who was supposed to cover. Owing to the fact that pitchers work differently on different hitters, there is no set standard to govern the play, so the scorers find it impossible to make a decision until the facts are made known.

CLARKE CLAIMS ERROR

In the case cited, Clarke should have covered the bag. Yesterday the new shortstop sought out newspapermen and declared he was in error in not covering. Moreover, Bartell has not made an error since he has been transferred to second base and it would be a little unjust to give him his only miscue on a play in which he took no part. So the official scorer rightfully made the correction.

And when Clarke snapped his fine hit over second to win yesterday's game, the only Pirate to rush out to shake his hand after he went over first base was Bartell. That's a fine spirit on the part of two boys who are just about old enough to

GARDEN TO MATCH LOUGHRAN AND SHARKEY

BOUT BETWEEN TAR, SCHMELING ABANDONED

By DAVIS J. WALSH,
International News Service.

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—Tommy Loughran, the light-heavyweight champion, and not Max Schmeling, the controversial champion, will meet Jack Sharkey for the Muldoon-Tunney bequest of the heavyweight title on September 26 and the meeting will take place at the Yankee Stadium here, and not at Navin Field, Detroit.

Tommy Loughran

This today seems to be the purport of a statement issued last night by the Madison Square Garden Corporation, outlining its latest policy on the heavyweight situation. It means that the Garden's war with the New York Boxing Commission is ended in what Mysterious Billy Carey, the welterweight promoter, probably would call a compromise. The boxing commission told him that he couldn't put on a Sharkey-Schmeling fight, in spite of his announcement that he could and would, either here or in Detroit. It finally was settled by mutual consent; that is, the boxing commission said there would be no Sharkey-Schmeling fight and Carey consented.

LOUGHRAN ACCEPTS

He closed with Loughran early last night, probably for a straight percentage of the receipts, after coming to a belated realization of the fact that Schmeling was due to get him nothing but a large order of bi carbonate of soda for his aching head. Sharkey already is under contract for a guarantee of $100,000, a tenth of which already is in hand, meaning Sharkey's. The noble tar also has a 25 per cent privilege, which probably is the figure that squared Loughran with the Garden crowd. Thomas, as a matter of fact, probably would have signed for 25 cents and the right to be good to his mother. He figures that the heavyweight championship is already his.

Whether the commission will recognize the new arrangement as a championship bout is not definitely known, but it probably will be feeling rather benign on the head of its victory of right over might or something. Besides, it is difficult to see how the substitution of Loughran can affect the status of the title shot, except possibly for the better. He, of course, must go through with his announced intention to abandon the light heavyweight championship and this may be done at the commission office either tomorrow or next Tuesday. It virtually is ordained that the board's benediction of the Loughran-Sharkey fight will follow. It will be scheduled for 15 rounds and anybody who can't afford to pay $20 for a ringside seat will be welcome—in Central Park.

MAXIE IS OUT

So two Americans are to have at it for the Muldoon-Tunney trophy, a distinct tripmph for the 100 per centers. Also two boxers of the dot-and-dash school, a triumph for William Muldoon. This gentleman thinks that prize-fighters are degrading; he shudders at their brutality and shrinks from their blood. He used to manage John L. Sullivan.

Herr Schmeling? He probably will return to Germany, where he can ponder the mystery of mankind at his leisure. He said he would fight no fights for Arthur Bulow, his step-manager, and it looks as if the Herr Max was right. In fact, it looks as if he may fight no fights for anybody. In any case, the local commission has clamped down the howser on him, and, with New York's supremacy sufficiently established in the minds of the Garden crowd, it might appear that Schmeling ultimately must make his peace here. He can do this only by going in there for Humbert J. Fugazy and Jimmy Johnston. Good old James, his heart's in the right place. So is his "drag."

As for the Garden, it gets better than a Mexican stand-off. It saves its life; it doesn't even lose its money. Loughran, quite a young man here since his great fight against Jimmy Braddock last month, will draw at least as well with Sharkey as Schmeling could have been expected to do. There may be as much as $400,000 in the till when the boys begin to pay off.

JACOBS WITH DEMPSEY

SPOKANE, Wash., Aug. 8.—(AP.)—Joe Jacobs, manager of the German heavyweight contender, Max Schmeling, has announced that it was "virtually certain" that Schmeling's next fight would be in Agua Caliente, Mexico. "Either for Promoter Jack Dempsey or against Mauler Jack Dempsey."

Jacobs said that since the Madison Square Garden Corporation had abandoned negotiations for a Schmeling-Sharkey encounter the way was clear to accept "a better offer from Dempsey."

Dempsey, he asserted, offered him $125,000 with the option of 25 per cent of the gate receipts for a Thanksgiving Day bout against an unnamed opponent, while Madison Square Garden offered only $100,000 with the option of 25 per cent. The chance of a Dempsey fight, Jacobs said, probably would come either in December or January at Agua Caliente.

Shown a dispatch which said that Tommy Loughran, light-heavyweight champion, might be matched against Jack Sharkey for a fight September 26, the German's manager said: "That tickles us to death. It will remove one pest."

He refused to amplify the statement.

He promised "more on the subject" after he had talked with Dempsey "within 24 hours."

GOLF AS CHAMPIONS PLAY IT

Should there be any play or whip in the shaft of an iron club?

Answered By

WILLIE OGG

New England professional, former Massachusetts Open, Shawnee Open champion.

It greatly depends on how the particular player plays his iron shots as to whether he should have whip in his iron clubs. There are some very good players of today who play their irons without taking turf and these can use shafts with a certain degree of whip to their own advantage. To those who take turf with their irons I would advise stiff shafts and with as little tortion as possible, because the heads turn in hitting the turf if the shafts are not strong.

POWLEY WINS CHANCE WITH N. Y. GIANTS

By TOM BIRKS.

Harry Powley, pitching ace of the Verona Community Club, of the West Penn League, will report to the New York National League Club, when the Giants come to Pittsburgh September 10, for its last western trip. Powley will be with the club during its engagement with the Pirates, then board the rattler with the club and finish the season with the New Yorkers.

The Verona righthander, possibly one of the best prospects ever turned out on the local lots, pitched to the Giants during batting practice before yesterday's game. Ray Schalk, former White Sox catcher, now coaching the pitching staff for the National Leaguers, took Powley in hand and tried out the speed king from the Community club.

SHOULD MAKE GRADE

Manager McGraw had a long conversation with Powley after the Verona boy left the mound, and the offer to finish the season with the Giants when they come to Pittsburgh on the next trip followed.

Manager McGraw gave the boy some advice, which no doubt he will follow, especially along the line of not listening to wiseacres telling him what is wrong with the style. Powley did not stay to see the game, and was anxious to get back to Verona to pitch in an elimination game last evening.

Fans in the district feel that Powley will make the grade. He can hit, run bases, and has a wonderful throwing arm. In fact, he can do anything that the real baseball player does.

CIVICS PLAY SMILERS

The feature game in the City League this evening will find the Stowe Civics challenging the leadership of Pleasant Valley Smilers at Vaseline field. Stowe has a chance to overhaul the Smilers should they cop this battle.

The Smilers, are eager to cop the second half and meet the N. S. Civics in the post-season play-off. Stowe is the one barrier that Johnny Dunsky's club must overcome. Mart Nary will probably oppose Saltic. The game will start at 6:30 sharp.

The Cheswick nine will meet Verona in the West Penn League this evening at Verona, North Bessemer will show its stuff at Wilmerding. Should Verona win this evening, it seems as if the West Penn race is over.

In the Pittsburgh Central loop, the J. J. Boyles will tangle with the Mt. Washington C. M. C.

RELIANCE WINS

Last evening's sandlot program was rather skimpy, few games being played. In the City League, Reliance Life defeated St. Johns 7 to 1, Homestead Aces turned in a 14-to-5 win over Westinghouse in the Tri-Boro, and St. Phillips defeated the Methodists 7 to 6 in the Crafton Church circuit. North Bessemer won over the Dan Heeps in a Greater Pittsburgh loop game.

The Homestead Grays won over the Agathons 2 to 0 at Charleston, W. Va. Verona, with Powley in fine form, defeated Swissvale Firemen 1 to 0 in a second-round elimination game.

HONUS WAGNER JOHN M'GRAW HARRY POWLEY

On the recommendation of Honus Wagner, former Pirate star, Manager John McGraw, of the Giants, yesterday gave Harry Powley, star pitcher and home run hitter of the Verona Community team, a tryout at Forbes Field and then signed him to join the club on its next visit here. Powley warmed up with Coach Ray Schalk and pitched to the Giant batters and then had a talk with McGraw, who is shown above giving him a few tips on how they do things in the majors, while Honus assumes the role of an interested listener.

has been brought along gradually, piling up a fine record of knockouts against a nondescript list of opponents. It is felt that he is ready to be cut loose now against the best in the featherweight class and the Brown and Martin matches are the first of the new campaign.

Sammy Mandell, who defended his lightweight title against Tony Canzoneri in Chicago last week, is confident he can beat Jackie Fields for the latter's welterweight laurels if he can get a crack at him. He defeated Fields in a non-title lightweight bout in Chicago last year.

The card for the Meyers Bowl show Monday night has been completed with the signing of Johnny Chiodo, of Johnstown, to box Frankie Graham, brother of Bushy Graham, in the second bout of six rounds, and Eddie Brannon, Negro, of the Hill, to meet Frankie Moran, of Homewood, in the six-round opener. Brooks Labach, of Williamsport and formerly of Wilmerding, boxes Young Saylor, of Charleroi, in the eight-round semi-final. Frankie Graham formerly boxed under the name of Frankie Garcia.

RANDALL BOXES LUCAS

Tiger Joe Randall, Negro knockout star, of Elizabeth, and Mike Lucas, of Cleveland, do the honors in the main bout of 10 rounds at Junction Park, New Brighton, tonight. The show will get under way at 9 o'clock. Mickey Solmen, of New Castle, meets Chuck Zelnack, of Glassport, in the six-round semi-final, and Walter Pickard, of Youngstown, opposes Patsy Perroni, of Canton, in the other six-rounder. In the two four-round bouts, Young Jacobs, of Canonsburg, meets Bud Morrison, of Canton, O., and Gunboat Smith, of Washington, Pa., will take on a sub for Georgie Compton, who was burned about the hands while at work last Monday night.

The Meyers Bowl has dropped negotiations for a fourth meeting between Phil Goldstein and Tommy Crawley, local rivals, both of whom recently staged good fights against Tony Herrera, and is casting about for another windup for its show one week from next Monday night. Herrera, by the way, is being sought for a bout at McKeesport late this month, and also at the Ebensburg Fair Grounds early next month, and will appear shortly in the Jolly Bowl at New Castle.

KOSKY AT NEW CASTLE

Sailor Kosky, of Chicago, who has boxed Ignacio Fernandez twice, Eddie Shea, Johnny O'Keefe and other good ones, has been matched to box Jackie Dugan, of Louisville, in the main bout at the Jolly Bowl, New Castle, next Monday night. Tommy Walsh, of Chicago, manages Kosky and is trying to force Tony Herrera into a match with him.

Art Malay and Frankie Wine, heavyweights, battle at Sebring, O., tonight, and Kid Kober and Duke Tramel meet in a special bout at Dallas, Tex., to test the anti-prize fighting law of the state.

PIRATES FACE CARDS TODAY

league, and the Cardinals are a good defensive organization. They seem too far out of the race to have any flag aspirations, but they will do everything within bounds to increase their position as regards prestige and cash. The four clubs of the first division share in the world series lucre, the reward being graduated by the position at the finish.

Remy Kremer was in rare form yesterday as the Freebooters took the measure of the Giants. The only victory achieved by the home team over the New Yorkers was endangered to such an extent in the ninth that the Pirates had to play their half of the battle to cop the laurel.

KREMER STRONG

Opposed to Larry Benton, who also was effective, Kremer shut the door in the faces of the New Yorkers through eight rounds. In the ninth, Boss McGraw sent Eddie Roush up to hit for Benton and this pestiferous player continued to be a pest by hitting safely to left. Kremer then issued the first pass of the game to Fullis and the Giants were deep in the old ball game when Fred Leach banged a double to left-center. Tony Kaufmann, who ran for Roush, scored on the double, while Fullis pulled up at third. Crawford batted for Farrell and walked, filling the bases. L. Waner made two pretty catches of drives from the dangerous bats of Bill Terry and Mel Ott, the Terry smash scoring one run and putting Leach on third from whence he tallied on the Ott wallop. Kremer then caught Crawford off first and the Pirates lost little time in opening up on Dutch Henry; who went to the mound for the invaders.

CLARKE'S HIT WINS

Ira Flagstead, former American League star, and Stewie Clarke, kid shortstop, were the heroes of the victory drive of the ninth with Rolly Hemsley, playing with his spiked foot, sharing the honors. After Comorosky had been retired, Rolly slapped a pretty single to right and Flagstead batted for Fred Brickell, on account of the change in the pitching. Flagstead drove a hot double down the rightfield line that sent Hemsley to third. McGraw ordered a pass for Earl Sheely that filled the bases, but Clarke slapped the first pitch through the box to center for a pretty single that won the battle.

DISBROW, LOGAN WIN FOUR-BALL EVENT

By VERN SWARTSFAGER

M. S. Disbrow and F. L. Logan, of the South Hills Country Club, captured the four-ball best-ball match against par, being 2 up, while Dr. S. B. Challinor, of the St. Clair Country Club, with a net of 66, won the 18-hole medal play tournament of the first one-day competition of the Pennsylvania Golf Association held at the South Hills Country Club yesterday. H. F. Grille and H. U. Baker were runners-up in the afternoon, being 6 up. F. A. Vance and H. K. Downe, Raymond L. Babcock and J. B. Crookston and T. L. Campbell and James L. Thomas were tied for third honors, being 4 up.

In the morning play, Challinor had an 81, which, with his handicap of 15, gave him the superiority over the field, J. B. Whitehead was second with a net 70, while V. S. Atwater and J. W. Sullivan were third with net 71s.

The tournament was not all that it was pepped up to be, the officers of the Pennsylvania Golf Association, except for Dick Long, paying little attention to how matters were run. John Graham, president of the West Penn Golf Association, awarded the prizes.

The Allegheny County Laundrymen's Exchange, with Dick Briny directing, is playing at the Shannopin Country Club today.

YANKS, A'S CLOSE SHORT SERIES TODAY

RIVALS DIVIDE TWIN BILL; TIGERS COP

By Associated Press

With all but two of the National League teams in transit from West to East yesterday, the spotlight's glare rested upon the double clash of the Yankees and the Athletics in Philadelphia. More than 40,000 Quaker City fans crowded into the park and countless other thousands languished disappointed in the streets outside as the leaders gained an even break with the runners-up in the first two-thirds of what some deem a crucial series.

Led by Babe Ruth, who hit his twenty-eighth with three on base, the Yankees exploded five home runs about the ears of Athletic pitchers in the opening game to win by 13 to 1, only to see the Mackmen run off with the second by 4 to 2, leaving Connie Mack's margin of 11½ games unmolested.

BABE CLEANS SACKS

The Babe hit his four-run homer with one out in the second. It was the Babe's second homer with the bases filled in successive games and the twelfth such blow of his career.

Roy Sherid deserved a better fate in the nightcap, his second complete game of one season. He entered the home half of the eighth with a 2 to 1 lead over George Earnshaw, but three hits, two of them doubles, and a fumble by Lazzeri gave the Mackmen three runs and the game. Connie Mack sent Bob Grove in to pitch the ninth just to remove any doubt that the game was over.

The Athletics and the Yanks will close out their current series with a single game today and then repair to the West for their final long trip of the season.

TIGERS BEAT TRIBE

At the meeting between the Indians and the Tigers in Cleveland, Dale Alexander treated himself to four hits, which helped the Bengals to halt Cleveland's rush toward third place, with a 14 to 4 victory. As a result, the Tribe fell from a tie with the Browns for the third rung.

Washington defeated the Red Sox at Boston by 4 to 2, and the Browns and the White Sox were traveling.

The only activity in the National League was at Forbes Field, where the Pirates nosed out the Giants by 4 to 3 in the ninth and shaved a more or less inconsequential half game from the margin of the Cubs. The Bruins now top the National Field by seven full contests.

REGION CHAMPS CLASH NEXT

Nation-wide attention has been focused on the regional tournament of the American Legion junior world series baseball program, in which the champion team of this state, Uniontown, will take part at Philadelphia, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of next week. Crossing bats in the Philadelphia tilt will be the champion teams of Pennsylvania, Maryland, West Virginia, Delaware and District of Columbia.

Should the champion team of this state win at Philadelphia, it will compete for further honors in an eastern sectional tournament in Griffith Stadium, Washington, D. C., August 20, 21 and 22, with President Herbert Hoover attending the opening game.

The team which emerges successfully from the Washington series as the eastern sectional champion, will cross bats at Louisville, Ky., September 4, 5 and 6, with the western champion team, to determine the world series championship. Arrangements have been made to broadcast the series at Louisville, play by play, over a network of the National Broadcasting Company, Dan Sowers, national director of the legion junior baseball program, has announced. Graham McNamee, famous sport announcer, will be at the microphone.

MILLIONS of this same size have been sold at 2 for a quarter—and at that price they were a wonderful value. Now at 10c, with nothing changed but the price, no other cigar made can even begin to compete with them.

STATE LEGION FLAG WON BY UNIONTOWN

HARRISBURG, Aug. 8.—(AP.)—Holding the slugging Minersville nine in check when hits meant runs, Uniontown won a 10-9 victory here yesterday and annexed the Pennsylvania championship in the American Legion junior baseball series.

The game resulted in heavy hitting on both sides, but the defense of the western lads was such that 10 Minersville runners were stranded on the sacks while only three Uniontown boys failed to score after reaching base. Both teams bunched hits effectively and profited by opponents' errors.

Uniontown's deciding factor was Joe Smith, who pitched the team to a win over York yesterday and halted Minersville in the eighth when the Schuylkill countians put on a four-run rally. With the tying run on base Smith fanned the side and held his 10-9 lead through the final frame. The score:

Return, Birthday Celebrated by McKechnie

A break in the National League schedule made it possible for William McKechnie, Cardinal pilot, to be in Wilkinsburg yesterday and with his family to celebrate his forty-second birthday anniversary.

Needless to say the Wilkinsburg McKechnies had a big time, with Bill receiving double congratulations. He was felicitated on his return to the majors as well as in honor of his natal day observance.

BERKELEY BELL BEATEN BY BRITON

SOUTHAMPTON, N. Y., Aug. 8.—(AP.)—With a smashing straight-set victory over Berkeley Bell, national intercollegiate champion, Norman G. Farquharson, of the Cambridge University tennis team, crashed into the semi-final round of the Meadow Club invitation tournament today.

The British collegian, who hails from South Africa and plays on that country's Davis Cup team, won by scores of 7-5, 6-3.

After trailing at 2-4 in the opening set, the young Britisher forged ahead with three straight games, saw Bell pull up level on his service, then captured the two deciding games with a masterful exhibition of stonewall net play. Except for the first few moments of the match, Farquharson held a distinct edge throughout.

He took the net at every opportunity for crash volley placements and Bell's best shots could not prevail to dislodge him. Farquharson several times retrieving shots that seemed sure placements. His drives were beautiful to behold.

HALTS BELL'S STREAK

Bell, fighting bravely, but now on the defensive, won his serice in the final set until games stood at 3-all, but then the Britisher stormed ahead with a brilliant rush that swept three games in a row and with it the set. Bell could make only a single point in the last two games as Farquharson, scenting victory, played the net with dashing abandon and deadly effect.

Bell, the country's eleventh ranking player, had not lost a set in this tournament until today.

A. L. TO USE RESIN BAG

EAGER TO CURB SLUGGING IN JUNIOR LOOP

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—American League pitchers will be allowed use of the resin bag beginning next April.

This definite step toward curbing the unbridled hitting of home runs was agreed to recently at a special meeting of the league's executives and managers.

The only dissenting voice was that of Connie Mack, manager of the Philadelphia Athletics, who cast a negative vote on the grounds that his pitchers were succeeding well enough without the use of resin and he could see no reason in giving fingers of rival clubs a "break."

The question of the resin bag has long been a cause of dissension in the junior loop, especially since its adoption several years ago by the National League. It was one of the favorite disagreements of Commissioner Landis and former president Ban Johnson—Landis looking with favor upon its use and Johnson being equally firm in his dislike.

vote, and it is a fine example to any of us.

Here's one that may not be as nice as the one you just read. In the first place, any fan holds the unwritten right to "ride," in the proper way, the players, umpires and coaches, when that individual puts down his tariff at the gate. That seems to be an unwritten part of the game. But those folks who razzed Jewel Ens in the ninth inning when Ens stopped Hemsley at third base were wrong in their baseball, even if they were right in their premise. Hemsley would have been out by such a large margin that some of the same folks probably would have jumped all over the coach for sending him in.

INJURY HANDICAP

There were at least three reasons why Rolly would have been killed off. The two boys handling the ball, Ott and Jackson, own two of the best arms in baseball, and Hemsley, with a spiked foot, is not running as fast as he would travel under ordinary conditions. Then, too, only one was out. Ens's judgment on the lines is excellent and his baseball is as sound as a dollar. He has made very, very few mistakes in waving in runners since he has worn the Pirate regalia. The men of the diamond will tell the same thing.

Among those present at yesterday's contest was John (Beans) Reardon, popular young arbiter of the National League. Beans was enjoying an off day and he called on a lot of his friends that were scattered about the stands.

STOGIES GAIN LEAGUE LEAD

CLARKSBURG, Aug. 8.—Wheeling came from behind here yesterday to defeat Clarksburg, 8 to 4, and gain undisputed possession of the league lead. A four-run rally in the second inning put the Stogies ahead after the General had counted twice in the first inning.

JOHNNIES WIN

JOHNSTOWN, Aug. 8.—Johnstown defeated Cumberland here yesterday, 5 to 1, Deane hurling a steady game, limiting the Colts to six scattered hits.

HITS THREE HOMERS

CHARLEROI, Aug. 8.—Catcher Hinkle, of Scottdale, hit three home runs against Charleroi here yesterday, but the clouts went for naught as the Guvs defeated the Scotties, 13 to 7. Rice got hour hits for Charleroi.

Misstep Favorite In Handicap Today

CHICAGO, Aug. 8.—(AP.)—A crack field of 22 handicap horses, dominated in the overnight list by Western performers, was entered for the third running of the Hawthorne handicap, $25,000 added, at a mile and a sixteenth, at the Hawthorne track today.

Misstep, four-year-old from the Lamar stock farm, which triumphed over a great field in the Arlington handicap, was a long favorite, in spite of the fact that he had an impost of 129 pounds, top weight. He was quoted at 8 to 5 overnight, with the Wild Rose farm's Dowagiac, winner of the $15,000 Stars and Stripes event at Arlington Park down at 4 to 1.

them, because there was no room for the holders in any corner from which they could see the game."

EVEN in its supposedly serious moments the A. A. U. can't avoid being amusing. President Avery Brundage yesterday found in connection with the charges of irregularities made by Ray Barbuti that they are lacking in proof though doubtless some of them are true or partly true." Something like the famous verdict of "not guilty but don't do it again."

But nobody expected anything more to come out of Barbuti's allegations. They'll whitewash the whole business, reinstate Barbuti with a public exoneration that will appease him, and then the same old system will be resumed.

Grays Open Series Here Tomorrow

The Homestead Grays return home tomorrow from their four-day tour with the Massilion Agathons to open an American Negro League series with the Bacharach Giants at Forbes Field. The clubs stage the second game Saturday afternoon and the third and fourth games will be played in the form of a double-header at the Sharon Elks' park Sunday. This twin bill originally was carded for Cleveland, but the followers of the Grays in Youngstown and Sharon asked Manager Posey to play at Sharon.

On Saturday evening, the Grays will invade the Homewood playgrounds, where they will resume their series with the Homewood club, of the Inter-County League.

The Grays and Agathons play at Dennison, O., today. Yesterday the Grays defeated the Agathons at Charleston, W. Va., 2-0. Smoky Joe Williams fanned 13 batters and allowed only three hits.

MacDonald Smith L. I. Open Champ

SALISBURY PLAINS, N. Y., Aug. 8.—(AP.)—MacDonald Smith, who has won many minor golfing tourneys from coast to coast, but never a major crown, has tucked the Long Island open title in his already well filled bag with an aggregate 72-hole medal score of 286. Second to Smith came Gene Sarazen, long-hitting former open king.

But two strokes separated the Scot and the one-time Italian caddy boy when the curtain rang down. Gene, who knows the fruits of the major golfing victories, established a course record of 66 over the long No. 4 championship course. The Carnoustie braw laddie confined his scoring to Old Man Par, never straying far from perfect figures.

HOUND RACING NOVELTY TO FANS HERE

Local sports followers are keenly curious about the new attraction that is to be dished up for them at the Bridgeville Speedway beginning Saturday evening—greyhound racing.

This sport is not new to many other centers in the United States, but is to make its first local appearance at the transformed speedway under the direction of men who have introduced it successfully in other spots. It is a sport that has a society following in many quarters, particularly in Florida, where it has had its widest vogue.

The hounds run over various distances on a regular track, chasing a mechanical rabbit. More than 200 of the thoroughbreds are installed in the kennels at the track and eight races will be put on each night, rain or shine, beginning at 8:15 o'clock, according to the officials in charge. The Keystone Kennel Club is behind the venture and hopes to make a success of the proposition on the grounds where autcmobile racing and boxing have proved only partially profitable. A corps of workmen has remodeled the premises to provide a covered grandstand for the protection of the patrons.

Announcement was made today of the arrival at the track of Mark o' Lane, the fastest dog in the racing world. The animal is owned by Dr. D. J. Frost, of Detroit, who handles large strings of canine thoroughbreds.

BRIDGEVILLE LOSES PERMIT

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 8.—(INS.)—Several more boxers, seconds and others connected with the boxing game in Pennsylvania found themselves on the "black list" of the state solons today as a result of the regular weekly meeting of the state athletic commission here.

Max Cryns Bridgeville, promoter, and Peter Lee, Charleroi promoter, had their licenses revoked.

The list of suspensions included: J. N. House, Youngstown, O., second, suspended indefinitely for conduct detdrimental to the sport at New Castle, Pa.; Thomas Houlihan, New Kensington promoter, suspended indefinitely for conduct detdrimental to the sport; Joe Todd, Donora boxer, suspended until he fulfills contract with Johnstown club, and Joe Guidici, Philadelphia boxer, ordered to pay $75 to Johnny De Marco, another boxer, and suspended indefinitely for failing to box De Marco after he had been contracted to do so at the Broadway A. C. here last Thursday night. The ring was wet by a heavy rain and after it ceased Guidici refused to box on a wet canvas.

Eugene Miller, Stroudsburg second, was reinstated, while the $10 purse of George Deiter, Tobyhanna boxer, was forfeited for failure to give his best at a show in Stroudsburg.

STOCKS ASCEND AS CREDIT EASES

Call Money Rate Lowered To 7 Per Cent; Speculative Sentiment Turns Bullish

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—(AP.)—Speculative sentiment turned bullish in today's stock market on a subsidence of fears over the credit situation.

Retention of the 5½ per cent discount rate by the Bank of England and a lowering in call money from 8 to 7 per cent helped to revive confidence, which had been badly shaken by the drastic break in some of the public utility stocks earlier in the week. A few soft spots cropped out here and there, but prices generally moved upward, although trading showed a marked reduction in volume.

The sharp decline in prices earlier in the week apparently had corrected the market's weakened technical position and relieved the strain on the money market which large scale bullish operations invariably entail. The borrowing demand for stocks also indicated the existence of a large short position which had been built up on the theory that the break in Middle Western utilities would undermine confidence and that the expected increase in the London rate would draw funds away from New York and accentuate the credit strain here.

COTTON BREAKS

Except for the usual batch of favorable earnings statements and the changes in the credit situation, there was nothing in the day's news to influence the price movement. Cotton broke sharply on the unexpectedly large government crop estimate. Although call money dropped to 7, time money held firm.

U. S. Steel common, which Wall street expects will be split up in the year, ran up 5⅝ points to a new high at 221 and then sold off on realizing. American Tobacco issues, which are also mentioned in stock split-up rumors, also ran up about 5 points to new high records.

Laclede Gas, which broke sharply yesterday, rallied 16 points. American Telephone moved up more than 4 points, but the other public utilities quieted down after an opening flurry of strength. Air Reduction, Pittsburgh Coal common and preferred, Cuban American Sugar preferred, International Silver, United Aircraft, Industrial Rayon and American Machine and Foundry sold 5 to 10 points higher.

ATCHISON LEADS RAILS

Atchison was again the leader of the rail group, soaring 9 to a new high at 274¼. Union Pacific rallied 7½ points and New York Central 4. Jersey Central broke 26 points and New York and Harlem 7, but the turnover was small.

Collins & Aikman broke 5 points to a new low at 41. Weakness also cropped out in Motor Products, A. M. Byers, American Power and Light and North American Company.

CHICAGO BOARD

CHICAGO, Aug. 8.—Scantiness of future delivery offerings did much to turn the wheat market upwards today after a wavering start. Reports of large business in flour Southwest tended noticeably also to strengthen wheat values. Opening unchanged to ⅜c off, wheat later scored a material advance all around. Corn and oats went higher also, with corn starting ¼c down to 1⅛c up, and subsequently showing a decided general rise. Provisions kept steady.

Wheat traders gave special attention at times today to reports of big buying of flour, especially in the Southwest. Transactions in flour were said to total the heaviest volume so far this year, with orders greatly in excess of the immediate capacity of the mills. On the other hand, Liverpool wheat quotations were considerably lower than expected, and this circumstance operated as a drag on the market here, despite assertions that Europeans were playing a cat and mouse game, wanting to buy but wanting also to make their own price.

Advices relative to overnight export business in wheat from North America were various. New York messages said the amount was limited. Omaha told of wheat being worked out of there for export via New Orleans barges from Cairo, and Winnipeg noted good purchases being made for trans-Atlantic shipment. Meanwhile, some authorities were forecasting less than half a crop for Australia owing to persistent drought.

The following quotations on the Chicago Board of Trade are reported by A. E. Masten & Co.:

Anaconda Chairman Talks Prosperity

BUTTE, Mont., Aug. 8.—John D. Ryan, chairman of the Anaconda Copper Mining Company, speaking here at a combined meeting of Butte civic clubs, stated that in the first half of this year Butte copper production and payroll both established new high records. Profits from these operations were so satisfactory as to warrant Anaconda's adopting a more than normal mine and metalurgical development program. He stated that the grade of ore mined during the first six months at Butte was higher as were also ore reserves than 25 years ago.

Congress.

Senate convenes August 19 and the House a month later, but traders are not worried over the coming event. They think it will be a constructive Congress, that no legislation likely to interfere with the unexampled prosperity of the country will have a chance of getting through. The people are prosperous and wish to continue so. In times like these, radical legislation would be frowned upon by the 10,000,000 to 15,000,000 people who own securities in various industrial, railroad, banking and other corporations and by wage earners who are receiving higher pay than ever before. Soap box oratory no longer makes votes for the aspiring politician. Note that all political platforms for the last 10 years have been of a constructive order with all radical planks removed.

Fiat Motors.

Some say a group of bankers has been accumulating Fiat Motor shares since the first of the year. If this is the case, the operation has been very successful as Fiat shares have moved neither up or down.

Narrow Trading Session in List; Report Blaw Knox 'Rights' to Be Offered

Trading continued quiet and there was little change of importance in the securities list on the Pittsburgh Stock Exchange today.

Except for one or two of the low priced fuel issues, most of the early dealings were in odd lots with quotations holding at or very near the levels prevailing on the close last night.

Reports of a pending stock purchase privilege on Blaw Knox failed to stimulate that issue, chiefly because of the fact that a rumor of such action was circulated in the Street at the time the company announced its plans to take over the Union Steel Casting Company, Lewis Foundry and Machine Company and the National Alloy Steel Company.

According to the current report new Blaw Knox stock will be issued to present holders on the basis of one new share at $35 for each five shares held. It is assumed that part of the proceeds will be used to retire the Union Steel Casting preferred of which there is $2,725,200 outstanding and probably Lewis Foundry preferred of which there is $250,000 issued.

The Union Steel common will be exchanged for Blaw Knox in the ratio of 87½ shares of Blaw Knox for each 100 Union Steel. Sufficient stock has been deposited to carry the plan through. The Blaw Knox Company will pay $32 a share to holders of Union Steel common who do not wish to make the exchange.

Foreign Buying Of Copper Heavy

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—Foreign purchases of copper continued in excellent fashion, with early reports estimating sales for export so far today at approximately 3,000,000 pounds.

Purchases of copper by European consumers during the current month to date are understood to be above the average. Price was strong at 18.30 cents a pound c.i.f. Hamburg.

In the domestic dealings buying is said to be on an enlarged scale. Engineering and Mining Journal reports that sales of copper for domestic delivery since the first of the month were about 17,000 tons, or 34,000,000 pounds, and that foreign sales were about 12,000 tons, or 24,000,000 pounds. It is significant that most of the purchases have been for prompt shipment. Price was firm at 18 cents a pound delivered, Connecticut Valley basis.

Half-Year Sales Of Associated Up

Merchandising sales of the Associated Gas and Electric System in the first six months of the year amounted to $1,612,241, a 54 per cent increase over the first half of last year. Electrical appliances accounted for $1,230,799.

COTTON MARKET

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—The cotton market today opened 6 to 8 points lower. Prices turned firm right after the opening on some trade buying and covering, but pre-bureau liquidation continued. There was a little selling on reports of showers with lower temperatures in the Texas Panhandle. This soon supplied the early demand and prices by the end of the first half hour were net lower, with October selling around 18.81c and March 19.27c. Business was quiet with traders evidently awaiting the government report scheduled for publication at midday. Private cables reported some local and continental liquidation in the Liverpool market, but said there had been a good spot interest with Russia.

The market stiffened up on covering later in the morning. Before trading was suspended to receive the government report, October had advanced to 19.00c and March to 19.40c, or about 4 to 9 points above yesterday's closing quotations.

The report making the condition of the crop 69.6 and the indicated crop 15,543,000 bales was above expectations, however, and there was heavy general selling when the market reopened with October selling down to 18.50c and March to 18.95c, or about 40 to 50 points below yesterday's closing quotations and half a cent below the high levels of the morning.

SUGAR MARKET.

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—The raw sugar market was quiet today, with no sales reported, although included in yesterday's business and not reported out until this morning was a small cargo of Cuban said to aggregate about 15,000 bags to an outport refiner at 3.83c delivered. This represented a decline of 1-32c from the previous price, and it was believed that more sugars could be obtained at the same level, but buyers showed no interest.

Raw futures were steady on covering and buying by commission houses, with offerings light. The market opened 1 point lower to 1 point higher and gained another 1 point on some positions with the list at midday about 1 point net higher on all positions. The volume of business was small and uncertainty over developments at Washington in connection with the tariff schedule restricted operations, with operators as a rule inclined to hold off. A private report in the trade estimated the outturn in Java at 2,913,000 tons, as against the last official estimate of 2,952,000 tons and last year's production of 2,939,000 tons.

Refined was unchanged, refiners continuing to list at 5.50c for fine granulated while re-sale granulated was obtainable around 5.15 to 5.20c.

Sidney Mitchell, A. P. Sloan Men Who Know Only Work

By B. C. FORBES

SIDNEY Z. MITCHELL, head of the Electric Bond and Share Company, influential advisor to scores of important utility corporations, and now one of the 12 richest men in America, is the greatest glutton for work in the whole country.

Are men who give up their whole life to work to be pitied? Or is their success to be envied?

MR. MITCHELL had to sweat prodigiously to qualify for admission to Annapolis Naval Academy. When he built the first puny electric power plant in the far Northwest, he again had to toil night and day. Nobody knew anything about the novel industry except himself. No sooner had he the first one going than he fared forth and started to raise money to establish other plants. He had to be his own stock salesman, his own real estate agent, his own plant designer, his own engineer, his own banker, his own power salesman, his own bookkeeper, his own repairman.

He became so accustomed to unremitting labors that the habit took such firm hold of him that, when he was induced by Charles A. Coffin, of the General Electric Company, to come East, Mr. Mitchell continued his ceaseless activities. The acquisition of wealth did not cause him to relax one iota.

Today, in his sixties, he is attending to more responsibilities than ever. It is usual rather than unusual for him to work at his office well into the evening, go home, resume work there, and keep unremittingly at it until the small hours of the morning. If some point arises on which he wants information, he thinks nothing of telephoning one or more of his lieutenants in the middle of the night. And pity the executive who cannot give the exact information without an instant's hesitation!

MR. MITCHELL has perhaps the most extraordinary memory of any living American. One visit to a plant suffices to store his mind with detailed information about every phase of it. And once information is lodged in the cells of his brain, it stays there. He constantly astounds and dumbfounds plant executives by questions he asks long after a visit, questions which often reveal that he has a better mastery of every detail of the plant than the man running it. He has mighty little patience with a man whose mind isn't undividedly on his work. Mitchell has no use for inexact information. If a thing isn't precisely right, then it is wrong—and it is the duty of everybody to have things precisely right.

He keeps his many close associates perpetually on the jump. Only men of unusual talents attract him and retain his interest. He demands much of them.

BUT no employer in America is more anxious than Mitchell to enable his co-workers to attain financial independence. He once told me that years ago his hobby was to help youths to get a college education, but that so many of them put on airs on graduating and balked at getting into grips with hard work that he turned his attention to fellows in his various organizations and that he has found real satisfaction in helping them to get on in the world. I know one Mitchell executive who, half a dozen years ago, had an extremely low bank account, but who could now write a check for a million dollars.

For Sidney Mitchell to attempt to play would be harder than the hardest kind of work.

ANOTHER phenomenally successful corporation head of similar type is A. P. Sloan, Jr., president of General Motors.

Mr. Sloan never plays. He knows no hobby but work. Like Mitchell, his brain is an encyclopedia which records every detail connected with his business. Recently I sat in the office of the president of one General Motors Company and listened to a conversation between him and Sloan which went into mystifying technical details of how a certain part of this company's forthcoming new model should be treated.

Sloan derives probably as much joy from his work as Mitchell, although the latter is far more given to laughter.

PERSONALLY, I never want to let work monopolize my life. Yet there are probably few men happier than Sidney Mitchell and Alfred Sloan.

And when it comes to investing your money, they are pre-eminently the type to hook up with. They will look after your interests day and night, Sundays and holidays, never missing a stroke beneficial to stockholders. See how Mitchell and Sloan shares have multiplied in value in the last few years!

PENNA. COAL OUTPUT UP

HARRISBURG, Pa., Aug. 8.—(AP.)—Production of bituminous coal in Pennsylvania in the first six months of 1929 increased 3,474,769 net tons over that of the corresponding period of 1928, while anthracite production dropped off 348,889 net tons in the same period, the State Department of Mines announced today.

In the first six months of this year 59,167,815 net tons of bituminous coal were mined and in the same period last year 55,693,046 net tons were produced. The corresponding figures for anthracite are:

In 1929, net tons 29,042,122, and in 1928, net tons 29,391,011.

The number of fatal accidents for the first six months of this year were 217 in anthracite mines and 208 in bituminous mines. In the same period last year there were 233 fatalities in anthracite mines and 355 in bituminous mines.

A picture of the coal industry in the Pittsburgh district, as drawn by J. D. A. Morrow, president of the Pittsburgh Coal Company, largest of the bituminous operators, is far from cheerful. Prices, he said, are the lowest in 16 years, and the once valuable lake trade has dwindled to almost nothing.

Western Pennsylvania operators find it difficult to compete with Southern West Virginia competitors who, notwithstanding the much longer haul, are able to lay down coal at the Great Lake ports at a freight cost only 35 cents a ton higher than Pittsburgh district producers are required to pay.

Although defeated in long litigation before the Interstate Commerce Commission and the courts, local operators are still trying to have the differential restored to the old figure of 45 cents. A meeting to consider ways of attacking the problem was held last week.

2 HELD IN FRAUD ON LOTTERY

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—(INS.)—Lawrence Stickman and Nathan Seligson, charged with attempting to bribe messengers to turn in false bank clearing figures so that the Harlem lottery might be beaten, were held in $5,000 bonds for hearing August 13 when arraigned today.

Stickman and Seligson yesterday approached messengers of press associations and newspapers with bribes to give the wrong figures which were generally used.

Both men were identified by one of the messengers.

The two men were arrested as they were talking to Harold Harris, 16, in front of the Clearing House.

The correct figures were $1,482,000 and $182,000,000. The winning number would have been 822. Gamblers who had previously bet on another number gained entrance to the room when the figures were chalked up on the board and succeeded in bribing some of the messengers to send out the fictitous figures.

CALL FINANCIER SMUGGLER

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—(INS.)—C. Robert Wolff, New York and St. Louis financier, faces criminal action today for alleged smuggling.

Federal authorities threatened the action, charging Wolff failed to declare $6,000 worth of jewelry when he returned from a European honeymoon trip last March 19.

The Wolffs paid $590.10 in duties when they left the pier. Later Customs Collector Elting was informed Mrs. Wolff had brought in a large assortment of lingerie. Wolff explained the lingerie was a wedding present given before leaving America.

The explanation was not accepted and $1,013.60 penalties were collected. Later the government received information concerning the jewelry and Wolff was again examined, and the jewelry declared forfeit.

Mr. Warner stated that the purchase negotiations have been conducted directly with Alexander Pantages and that the deal has nothing to do with recent acquisition of other Pantages properties by the Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corporation.

Steel's Sensational Rise Ascribed to Expected Further Dividends.

EXTENDING its sensational rise by some 5 points, Steel common was easily the outstanding feature of the day, tightening its grip on the position of market leadership. The remarkable advance in the industrial bellweather was accompanied by revival of predictions that the corporation will cut another "melon" for stockholders before the year is out. Certainly its action on the tape, which usually is found to be a reasonably reliable index of the future, may be accepted as foreshadowing something in the way of special action. But directors only met last week, and are not scheduled to meet again for action in dividends until the last Tuesday in October. In usually well-informed quarters, however, it has been the opinion right along that a split-up or stock dividend would be preceded by something in the way of an extra cash dividend and an increase in the present regular $7 rate.

More or less perplexed by the disappointing showing of second quarter carnings of Calumet & Arizona, the Street is patiently awaiting the publication of figures for the same period by some of the other copper companies. Calumet & Arizona reported net of only $805,325, equivalent before depreciation and depletion to but 95 cents a share on the stock contrasted with net of $3,690,617, of $4.38 a share in the March quarter. The Granby Consolidated report showed up rather well comparatively, but the speculative element is now disposed to await the results of some of the larger companies before becoming too enthusiastic over the copper shares which presently are the subject of much bullish discussion.

RESUMPTION of trading in the cotton market after the customary recess while the government crop report was making its appearance, brought a drop of $2.50 to $3 a bale in the Southern staple. The bureau report showing an indicated crop of 15,543,000 bales was interpreted bearishly inasmuch as the government's figures ran approximately 200,000 bales in excess of the average of private forecasts which had prepared the market for an indicated yield of around 15,345,000 bales. Last month's government report placed the indicated yield at 15,440,000 bales, so that on the basis of the figures published today it was evident the crop is doing prety well despite the fact that weevil activity is more general this year than in 1928.

Wall Street breathed a mite easier with the English bank rate question out of the way for at least another week. But in view of the further sharp contraction in the Bank of England's reserve ratio, retention of the rate in this instances was regarded generally as merely deferring an ultimate increase unless conditions change radically for the better immediately. The bank's reserve ratio was down to 22.4 per cent, the lowest in several years, against a high of 57 per cent established after the rate was raised from 4½ to 5½ per cent last February. The gold position was bolstered by yesterday's purchases of metal, yet the bank showed a further loss in bullion holdings on the week.

THE speculative fraternity at the moment is in a highly nervous frame of mind, a condition which is reflected in the present character of the market. Aside from unfavorable credit conditions, and anxiety over the British financial position, conditions which the market has been able to ignore right along, the situation does not appear to have changed greatly in the last few weeks. Yet traders big and small, with the usual few exceptions of course, are prone to extend their positions marketwise at the moment. While more or less anxious, the average traders show no disposition to get out of stocks, but on the other hand are equally reticent about extending commitments. The result is something of a stalemate, with the market sluggish and movements with bullish activity limited to a handful of leading stocks.

Among the food shares, National Dairy Products turned up as one of the strong features of the day, with revival of bullish activity in that issues explained later by the action of the board on the quarterly dividends due at this time. The present stock represents a split-up of the old shares on a two-for-one basis. Payments were inaugurated on the new stock three months ago at the rate of 37½ cents a share quarterly in cash and 1 per cent in stock.

RAIL RATE CUT SOUGHT HERE

Through freight rates in single amounts from Pittsburgh and other eastern points to destinations in Iowa, Minnesota, Missouri, Kansas, Nebraska and the Dakotas in lieu of existing sums of local rates east and west of the Mississippi River gateways, (but subject to same as maxima) have been recommended by Examiners Koebel and Paulson in their proposed report to the Interstate Commerce Commission, according to the Traffic Division of the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce.

This proceeding was instituted about three years ago by the Commission due to a large number of formal complaints filed by Kansas City, Omaha and other cities in Western Trunk Line territory, which were consolidated with it, as a general rate structure investigation under the Hoch-Smith Resolution, and known as Docket No. 17,000, Part 2.

The Traffic Division of the Chamber of Commerce of Pittsburgh and numerous similar organizations participated in the hearings which were held in Chicago, Kansas City, Omaha and other points, and presented testimony in favor of the establishment of through freight rates in single amounts.

Through rates from eastern points to the Southwest and Pacific Coast states have been in existence for many years, but none have been in effect to Western Trunk Line territory. St. Louis and other Mississippi River cities opposed the establishment of through rates between Eastern and Western Trunk Line territories on the premise that eastern manufacturers would make a "dumping ground" of Western Trunk Line territory for their surplus products. This position is condemned by the examiners. An analysis of the report is now being made for the information of Pittsburgh shippers.

Exceptions must be filed with the Commission on or before September 30, and replies thereto on or before October 15. Oral argument before the entire Commission will be held at Washington on October 21 to 25, 1920.

WORKERS GIVEN VOICE IN BIG BUSINESS

Employes Get Reports from Bethlehem Steel President; Railroads Ask Unions Aid

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER.

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—Prosperity should be regarded as more than an occasion for splitting up stocks and declaring extra dividends. It should be used as an opportunity for enlarging the return to the great republic of workers who contribute to the successful operation of a company.

Eugene G. Grace, the conspicuously able president of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation, which, incidentally, is now larger than the United States Steel Corporation was when it was first formed, has established the interesting precedent of making periodic reports on the progress of the company to the workers, just as he submits annual statements to the stockholders.

Visualizing the human aspects of the new prosperity in the steel industry, Mr. Grace this week pointed out to the employes:

EMPLOYMENT DIVIDENDS

"The company's progress has enabled us not only to provide steadier work for our employes than at any time in recent years, but also to resume payment of dividends to our common stockholders after five years' interruption, and to share with them in other ways the company's prosperity. The results which have been accomplished should be especially gratifying to the employes—so many of whom are also stockholders—for the evidence is plain that this achievement means work well done all along the line."

Enlightened managers recognize the value of frequent consultation with employes, from whom few secrets are kept. The new interchange of views and ideas not only removes barriers which create misunderstanding, but also brings out numerous practical suggestions for better performing the day's work.

Daniel Willard, president of the Baltimore & Ohio, went further than the rest by setting up machinery for co-operating with workers in the shops through their outside, independent trade union, the International Order of Machinists. Companies such as Bethlehem and the Pennsylvania Railroad function through inside company unions, which, by the way, have had a prodigious growth since the war.

MORE MELONS CUT

The present record-breaking prosperity constitutes a glorious occasion for cutting new melons in the realm of relations with labor. The precise steps which should be taken in particular companies will be indicated in conferences with the workers themselves. In addition to reasonably short hours of labor and sanitary working conditions, workers want the highest possible wages and also an opportunity to invest their savings judiciously. As a group, employe stockholders who took advantage of opportunities to buy the shares of employing corporations have amassed in the aggregate spectacular profits.

With industrial and public utility shares currently selling higher than in the past in relation to earnings, because of a widespread disposition to discount the future, employers should recognize the added hazards and seek to work out special plans for extending ownership among employes, which will minimize loss.

The diversified investment plan, under which the General Electric Company invests savings of employes, is especially well adapted to existing conditions. It should be widely studied by other companies—and extensively imitated. Gerard Swope, sagacious president of General Electric, will be glad to guide other executives in getting up such an investment program for workers.

PRICE CUT TO WORKERS

Where companies prefer for a variety of reasons to continue to sell their own common shares to employes they should give them a preferential price. The Standard Oil group contributes out of the corporate treasury one-third of the purchase price, which constitutes a margin of safety against market depreciation. The great Atlantic and Pacific Tea Company sells treasury stock to employes far below the price currently quoted at the market place. The Graybar Company, which eventually will become 100 per cent employe owned, ignored the fancy and extravagant prevailing price-earnings ratios at which stocks are currently selling, and offered its valuable shares to employes at the asset value—a rare bargain for those who were eligible to take advantage of it.

There are other opportunities for alert executives. They can invent programs for taking care of employes who are thrown out of work by technological improvements, making such displacements—temporary in their nature—a charge on the industry, rather than a charge on the unfortunate individual who is displaced by an automatic machine. Now is the time to consider these innovations in making American civilization more humane and more civilized. This is the golden age of peak profits, when there is a chance to be wisely generous.

The current prosperity in the United States is built largely on high wages and managerial efficiency, and only a little imagination is needed to establish new high records in liberal treatment of loyal and capable employes.

KETTLEMAN OIL AGREEMENT VITAL

Secretary Wilbur Considers That Result Shows Way To Control Other Pools

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—A majority of operators in Kettleman Hills oil field in California have agreed on a program which should lead to unified development of this project, according to Secretary of the Interior Wilbur. He declared this step shows possibilities in handling pools discovered or yet to be discovered.

"The conservation program of the Federal Oil Corporation Board has thus brought about a striking result in the field of conservation," he said.

Dr. George Otis Smith, director of the United States Geological Survey, who has returned from meetings of the Kettleman Hills operators, declared the area comprised in the agreements covering the three domes is 150 square miles, of which slightly over 53 square miles is owned by the United States.

DRILLING RESTRICTED

A slowing-down program, Dr. Smith said, is being adopted for all three domes, even before the productive area has been outlined. The wells that have already reached the producing zone, however, outline a triangle 6¼ miles on its base, trending northwest and southeast, and ⅝ mile across. Some 25 other wells are drilling in the north dome, which is much the larger of the three areas, having reached depths varying from 1,500 to 7,000 feet, and most of these under the terms of the agreement will be continued to the top of the oil sand.

"Drilling activity in the middle dome has been completely suspended," Dr. Smith continued, "and only two wells are being drilled in the south dome. Two wells only are producing oil on the north dome and only two others may produce later under terms of that agreement, but whenever the discovery well is brought under full control all production will be stopped. The period of suspension extends until January 1, 1931, for the middle and south domes and until July 1, 1931, for the north dome. Provision is made in all these agreements for an earlier termination of the suspension if there develops an actual market need of oil from Kettleman Hills.

CO-OPERATIVE CLAUSE

"A significant paragraph in the north dome agreement looks ahead to the future of the Kettleman Hills development and shows the interest that has been aroused in the possibilities of economy in a field where a well costs at least a quarter of a million dollars. This paragraph reads:

"'In line with the government's policy of oil conservation, to which this agreement contributes, the parties interested in the Kettleman Hills field undertake by the appointment of a representative committee or by other means to consider a plan of unit development or other co-operative method of developing this great structure with a maximum of production and utilization at a minimum of operating costs, such committee to report its progress from time to time to the Secretary of the Interior, and when deemed opportune the secretary will propose the necessary legislation enabling the government's participation in the proposed co-operative plan by authorizing both the necessary acreage involved and the substitution of a fixed and definite share in the output in lieu of the existing different rates of royalty for primary and secondary leases'."

RESOURCES CONSERVED

Secretary Wilbur declared that "this arrangement in the Kettleman Hills oil field production problem indicates that, even in the presence of a wild discovery well wasting gas in enormous quantities, it is possible to settle many of the problems of controlling the future production of the pool by conferences and by mutual consent, rather than settling them over a mile under the ground. With a great known pool of oil and gas it is safe and intelligent to plot and plan beforehand the way engineers are wont to do, rather than to plunge in regardless of consequences. In the long run the interests of all involved are benefited by orderly engineering procedures. The most important thing to every one, oil owners, operators and public alike, is to secure the maximum yield of valuable oil products from the pool."

The largest increase was made by Safeway Stores with sales of $18,971,315, against $8,852,670, an increase of 114.3 per cent.

THE Vulcan Detinning Company, one of whose plants is located on Neville Island, has renewed a contract with the Continental Can Company whereby Vulcan will purchase the big can maker's entire output of scrap tin plate from all of its factories east of the Rockies. The contract will run for 10 years.

The Vulcan plant on Neville Island is the former Republic Chemical Company property, acquired by the detinning company in 1920. The business of the Vulcan Detinning Company consists of separating and recovering the component metals of waste tin plate by various processes, the products being tin, various chlorides of tin, tin oxide, caustic soda and detinned steel billets.

Favorable Arrangement

THE arrangement with Continental Can is expected to prove profitable to both concerns. The plants acquired by Continental Can over the past few years will now be able to sell their scrap profitably, whereas under independent operation the scrap of these individual factories was so small in quantity and so far from the Vulcan plant that previously it constituted a disposal problem. The economy achieved by the contract will likely increase the earnings of the group of plants now under the Continental Can banner.

The renewal of the contract to dispose of the can company's waste clippings and stampings for the next 10 years may be interpreted as indicating a continuation of good business for Vulcan Detinning, provided the tin market remains stable over this period.

Tin Slump Cuts Profits

VULCAN DETINNING was hit hard a few years by a drastic break in tin prices. A spectacular decline occurred in the company's shares on the New York Stock Exchange in 1927 when the common stock collapsed after a sensational run-up to around $80 a share. Previous to that year the stock had never sold above $15 a share. In 1927 the company's net income dropped to $249,569 from $398,511 in 1926. In 1928, however, the company retrieved all of that loss and reported net income of $438,383.

So far in 1929 the recovery has continued and the net earnings for the six months to June 30 were $320,452, equivalent to $7.31 a share on the 32,258 shares of combined common and common A stock after provision for regular dividends on the preferred and preferred A stocks. Back dividends on the preferred stocks now amount to $4, and it is likely that some of this accumulation will be paid off out of this year's earnings.

Second Half Outlook

WHILE the latter half of the year is usually the better for the Vulcan Detinning and present factors indicate a probable new peak in earnings for the company in the final six months of 1929, observers point out that so many factors enter into the situation that a long distance calculation of its earnings prospects cannot be made with safety.

At present, though, the tin trade is more stable than it has been for some time, due, mainly, to the efforts of the British tin interests, and since there have been no important discoveries of new tin deposits recently, it seems likely that Vulcan Detinning, which recovers the original metals from waste tin plate, would be in a good position to profit by steadily decreasing supplies of tin. The processes by which the company recovers the pig tin and other products from waste tin plate are patented.

Dividend Prospects

NO DIVIDENDS have been paid on the common stock but the market price of the issue has been mounting steadily and it seems likely the management will consider taking some action shortly. At the high yesterday Vulcan stood at 138½, comparing with the record high of 145 established about a week ago. At the beginning of the year the stock sold as low as 50.

There are four classes of Vulcan Detinning stock, consisting of $1,500,000 7 per cent preferred; $919,400 7 per cent preferred A; 20,000 shares of common, and 12,260 shares of common A. In June, next year, the common stocks become interchangeable. If the earnings continue high, dividend action may be taken before that time. It is also likely that a split-up will be made after the consolidation of the stocks, as there will then be only 32,260 shares outstanding.

July Ingot Output Makes New Record

July steel ingot production totaled 4,838,093 tons or 186,080 daily, a new peak for any July, vs. 4,881,370 tons or 195,255 daily in June and 3,805,598 or 152,224 daily in July, 1928, according to American Iron and Steel Institute. July output was at rate of 94.88 per cent capacity vs. 99.56 per cent in June and 80.75 per cent in July, 1929.

Fageol Motors Net For Half Increases

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 8.—Fageol Motors reports net profit of $182,478 for the six months ended June 30, 1929, equal, after preferred dividend requirements, to 77 cents a share or at the annual rate of $1.53 per share on the 200,000 shares of common outstanding. This compares with net of $149,436 for the corresponding period of 1928, equal, after preferred dividends, to 60 cents on the same capitalization.

Bank of England Rate Is Unchanged

LONDON, Aug. 8.—The minimum rate of discount of the Bank of England remained unchanged at 5½ percent today.

SCRAP PRICES UP HERE

Iron and steel scrap prices in Pittsburgh district show a further tendency upward, according to Daily Metal Trade. No. 1 heavy melting steel is up 25 cents to $19.25 on recent sales of limited lots. Machine shop turnings are 50 cents higher at $12.50 to $13.00, with shoveling steel turnings up a similar amount.

In the Cincinnati district, melting steel has advanced 25 cents to a range of $13.75 to $14.25.

In the Cleveland market shoveling steel turnings have advanced 50 cents a ton to a range of $11.50 to $12.00. No. 1 heavy melting steel is nominally unchanged at $15.50 to $16.00, although dealers are reported to have paid $16.50 for select grades. Strength at Youngstown is exciting the market in that district, dealers are reported to have been offered $18.50 delivered Valley for compressed sheets and higher for heavy melting steel. Plate mills operate at capacity.

Eastern plate mills continue to operate at virtual capacity with deliveries ranging from three to six weeks, says Daily Metal Trade. General demand is holding up exceptionally well, and the flow of tonnage to the eastern mills is expected to be augmented shortly by some railroad business now pending, including 1,250 freight cars for the Lackawanna and 200 for Reading.

Mills in Chicago district are quoting seven to eight weeks deliveries on steel plates. Shipments have been usually heavy and sales have been at a rate comparable to shipments.

Large Cotton Crop Indicated by Report

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—The crop reporting board of the Department of Agriculture places the condition of the U. S. cotton crop as of August 1, last, at 69.6 per cent of normal versus 67.9 per cent August 1, 1928, and 10-year average, 67.4 per cent.

Indicated production is 15,543,000 500-pound bales versus 14,291,000 on August 1, 1928; 1928 crop totaled 14,378,000 bales. Census Bureau reports 86,970 running bales were ginned from the crop of 1929 prior to August 1 versus 88,761 ginned from the crop of 1928 prior to August 1, last year. Prior to August 1, 1927, 162,283 bales were ginned from the 1927 crop on estimated acreage of 46,695,000 acres to be harvested this year. A crop of 15,543,000 bales would indicate an approximate yield per acre of 159.3 pounds of lint cotton versus 152.9 pounds in 1928, and 156.8 pounds in 1927. Ten-year average is 155.8 pounds.

JULY BUILDING TOPS JUNE

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—Reports to Bradstreet's of building permits filed at 172 cities of the United States for the month of July show a total value of permits for building in that month of $226,108,914, as against $197,283,540 at identical cities in June and $267,921,415 in July a year ago. There is here shown a gain of 14.6 per cent over June, this contrary to the experience of recently preceding years, when July showed recessions from June, but a decrease of 15. 6 per cent from July a year ago. The total at New York City for July is $56,708,140, as against $37,102,246 in June and $73,853,613 in July a year ago, a gain of 52.8 per cent over June, but a decrease of 23.2 per cent from July last year. At the 171 cities outside of New York the total value of the permits is $169,400,765, as against $160,181,294 in June and $194,067,803 in July, 1928, a gain of 5.8 per cent over June, but a decrease of 12.6 per cent from July last year. Thus, there is a fairly well defined gain over June, but decreases of smaller degree than in recent months from like periods a year ago.

Features of the July report are that only two groups—the central-western and the Pacific and Mountain states cities—show decreases from June, whereas only two other groups—the New England and the northwestern groups—show gains over July a year ago.

For seven months of this year the total value of permits for building is $1,999,729,187, as against $2,069,497,683 in the like period a year ago, a decrease of 3.3 per cent.

BROKERS FIND LOST FUNDS

CHICAGO, Aug. 8.—(INS.)—The hundreds of investors who entrusted their savings to the brokerage firm of J. B. Greenfield & Company, took new hope today following the announcement that much of the "lost" $750,000 of the company's funds would eventually be recovered.

"A great part of the money which has been termed 'lost,' Greenfield stated, "is represented by stock shares which are now in transit and will eventually be turned over to the purchasers for whom the firm acted.

"It is true that the firm operated with large overhead expenses, but it is also true that there has been no absconding. I believe all claimants will eventually receive dollar for dollar on their investments. This may be delayed by receivership proceedings."

Attorneys for Greenfield stated that their client would appear at the state's attorney's office today to answer all questions.

Hope that Frank J. Kohlhaas, millionaire coal operator of Calumet, Mich., would make up the losses out of his personal fortune was dispelled when a record was found in the company's book pointing out that he had resigned as vice president over a year ago.

More Miles From Tires.
Make your old tires help you pay for the new! It may be economy for you to buy new tires when the old ones show wear, but it's needless waste to throw the old ones away.
There are many hundreds, even thousands, of miles of service still in them—and many auto owners who have the time and mechanical ability are seeking just such as you have been throwing away.
So advertise your used tires in the Classified Ads—it's economy for you, and economy for those who come to buy.

SOMEONE wants your property. Many people are anxious to find a house to rent. Have you placed an Ad in the Rental Columns?

BUGS BAER Says

PARKING IS SUCH SWEET SORROW

THERE are two motor cars for every pedestrian.

One to smack him low, and one to drive him away with all honors and respect due to those who have been low-bridged.

"Bugs" Baer

We admire and relish the automobile industry.

It has made such strides that we think the bicycle is doomed.

But there is one feature about the bicycle that has been lost in the progressive shuffle. This item is very important in the cool of the evening when the parking begins.

The horse was called man's best friend. Not because he could gallop, eat oats and go seven days without water.

But because the horse could park himself.

That's why the bicycle was man's second-best pal.

You could always find parking space for it.

A bicycle would fit in the picture anywhere. Lean it up against a tree. Put it under the front porch or behind the towel rack.

No matter where you park it, the old bike was a bike until the end, with its bent frame and its faithful punctured tires.

Where can you discover parking space for the motor car today?

Nowhere. Whereupon we rush to the aid of parkless humanity with a revolutionized invention.

The self-parking motor car!

It parks itself! It breaks the endurance record for gasoline breathing vehicles with mon-oxide perfume and re-fuels in mid-traffic.

By the aid of magnetic hubs and a gyroscopic bumper, it discovers acreage on boulevards and parkage on avenues.

It parks itself. How it does it, we don't know. The patent office has been asked for blueprints and specifications.

In another year we expect to be richer than one of John Rockefeller's over-dimed caddies.

Even if it doesn't work—it's a good idea.

I have not been too long in this country but am studying carefully and as I am pursueing courses in financial and currentcy matters I feel I am more befitting to treat about such subject in my poam for submittal for your contest. My poam, therefor, has relation with the small new moneys now issuing by our U S Govt and is entitled with the name of

"LITTLE BILS CURE OUR ILS."

Now our great Govt. has issued these new little bils,
They should cure quite a lot of our financial ils,
And save our pockets.
You can get so many more in your tils
Without crowding and wrinkling the bils,
Before you lock it.

And save the ware and tare on your clothes,
And also on the ladies hose,
By not stretching
Them so much like we used to have to do
Before we got these smal bils so new,
Oh, what a blessing.

And bankers and newspaper men and other plotocrats,
Won't have to stagger under such loads and use there hats,
To carry there money.
But these new little bils are as good, you bet,
And have the same utility to pay your debt,
Though small and cunning.

Yours so much lovingly,
Amuello Andrada.

Pictures Make Us Think

The Grave Is Deep.

REAL PEACE AT LAST. MARSHAL FOCH AS HE LAY DEAD, IN HIS HOME IN PARIS.

"The boast of heraldry, the pomp of pow'r,
And all that beauty, and that wealth e'er gave,
Await alike the inevitable hour,
The paths of glory lead but to the grave."

Millions of times that verse from Gray's "Elegy in a Country Churchyard" has been repeated.

But it is not true that "paths of glory lead but to the grave."

Everything in life leads to the grave. It leads also to what is BEYOND the grave.

THE MARSHAL'S WAR HORSE "DIXMUDE."

What the "beyond" is, we don't know.

But we do know that the paths of glory, the paths of service to other men, the paths of good work unselfishly done, DO NOT lead to the grave alone.

The path of honest service leads to esteem in the minds of men, to grateful remembrance, to all that is really worth while in THIS age.

Who can doubt that honest service, glorious work, unselfish effort here are rewarded in a better world?

Foch, the great French Marshal, head of the Allied armies, has been for months in his grave. The grave that leads to oblivion and forgetfulness for most of us, cannot shut out the glory of his name.

These pictures interest us today as they would have done the day after his funeral.

You see the Marshal's strong face, as he lies in the Chapelle Ardente.

of his old war charger, Dixmude, puzzled by the display and the huge crowd, puzzled by his magnificent black covering spangled with silver stars, wondering perhaps why he hears no cannon or bomb exploding.

The picture at the bottom presents a contrast that will interest thoughtful men.

On one side you see the Prince of Wales, in elaborate military regalia, on his way from the great Cathedral of Notre Dame to the beautiful gold dome of the palace of the "Invalides," where the Marshal's body lies.

The little old man beside the Prince walking painfully on a cane, nearly ninety years old, is the great Frenchman Clemenceau.

He and Lloyd George between them won the war.

Through the war Clemenceau stood behind Foch, and be-

Bible Passages

Quench Not the Spirit

(I Thessalonians 5; 14-24.)

NOW we exhort you, brethren, warn them that are unruly, comfort the feeble minded, support the weak, be patient toward all men.

See that none render evil for evil unto any man; but ever follow that which is good, both among yourselves, and to all men.

Rejoice evermore.

Pray without ceasing.

In everything give thanks: for this is the will of God in Christ Jesus concerning you.

Quench not the Spirit.

Despise not prophesyings.

Prove all things; hold fast that which is good.

Abstain from all appearance of evil.

And the very God of peace sanctify you wholly; and I pray God your whole spirit and soul and body be preserved blameless unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ.

Faithful is he that calleth you, who also will do it.

Worst Story I Have Heard Today

By WILL ROGERS.

IT'S awful hard to make little boys be polite, especially to their guests. And when a boy is only five or six he generally don't mind hitting his girl friend a bat in the eye, either.

A little boy by the name of Lester beat up his girl friend in his own house one afternoon, and his dad gave him a good spanking for it.

"Don't you know better than to hit a lady?" his dad says. "And anyhow, to beat up a guest?"

"But Mildred's mama said she must come home at four, and it was a quarter past four when I started hitting her."

"But what's that got to do with it?"

"Well, I couldn't be impolite and tell her it was time for her to go home, could I?"

Two Prayers

LET me forget all doubt, all hate,
All cruelty and wrath,
All thought of crouching fears that wait
Along to-morrows path.

Let me forget the little lore
Of earthly ways I know.
Let me prize less and less the store
Of goods the years bestow.

Let me recall the kindly smile,
The handclasp of a friend,
The look that brightened for a while
A weary, dark day's end.

Let me remember faith that came.
When faith was all my need,
Let me remember love's white flame
And hope's new-planted seed.

Two prayers upon my lips suffice,
What need is there of more?
Who keeps all good, forgets all vice,
Stands near to Heaven's door.

Isn't It So?

A miser is known by the money he keeps.

WHY YOU'RE NOT PROMOTED

By Herbert Kaufman

SUCCESS is a mosaic pattern of uninteresting details.

The man ahead is usually there because he regularly dots the i's and crosses the t's which YOU sloppily disregard.

Business always has a job waiting for descendants of the boy who stuck his finger in the leaking dyke.

Every other ability is SECONDARY to RELIABILITY.

Slip-shod brilliance never dazzles the balance sheet.

ONE dependable employe is worth a DOZEN error-missers. Folk who neglect the little corners of tasks don't get a chance at cornice jobs.

Misdirected energy and productive toil are as far apart as a bungler's estimate of his worth and the record's KNOWLEDGE of his value.

Track-walkers who become railroad presidents learn nothing essentially NEW in their upward climb. They simply keep applying the habit of watchfulness to their broadening responsibilities. They appreciate, through experience, the far-reaching consequence of apparent TRIFLES and learn to teach organizations how to handle their daily tasks with precision and alacrity.

THAT'S the quality which promotes men from OVERALLS to OVERSEERS.

Inaccuracy's expense account is heavier than the nation's tax bill.

Loosely drawn contracts, unpunctuated letters, incomplete shipping directions, misfilled orders, unverified specifications, overlooked mail, disregarded instructions and upset schedules explain why you aren't promoted—and WON'T be.

THE reason so many college men are being passed by ex-office boys is because dear old Alma Mater didn't furnish a course in loose-screw tightening. The TIN PAIL that never drips always gets the preference over the GOLD BUCKET that DOES.

Almost anybody can do almost anything NINETY per cent as well as the next fellow.

But our profit and loss margin lies in the remaining TEN per cent.

Life's big opportunities and dividends are concentrated in the FINISHING DEPARTMENT.

THE COSMIC DAY

By Archibald Henderson

IF YOU were asked what is a day, you would probably answer: twenty-four hours. For that, indeed, is the period of rotation of the earth. Of course this "day" includes both day and night. Other planets, of course, have different days to that of the earth. A planet with a different period of rotation to that of the earth would have a longer or shorter "day."

Similarly, planets have different years, depending upon the length of time it takes the planet to traverse its orbit. Thus the year of Mars is about twice as long as the year of the earth. As we move round the Sun, we overtake Mars every two years. Thus a Martian year is double an Earthly year.

Now let us consider for a moment our galaxy, or the system of stars in the visible universe. The central nucleus of our galaxy is an enormous mass of stars, at least one hundred million in number. Our sun is not the center of the universe; it is "but an insignificant speck around which flits a shadow called the earth, rotating around a focal point near where the constellations Scorpio, Ophiucus, the serpent-carrier, and Sagittarius, the archer, merge."

The central nucleus of our galaxy is some 55,000 light years thick and even larger in diameter. Shapley's investigations show that "the center of the galaxy is bounded by billions of stars scattered in space as if on a gigantic watch. So huge is the watch that it takes light, traveling through space at the rate of 186,000 miles a second, or 6,000,000,000,000 miles, three thousand centuries to traverse its diameter and nearly fifteen hundred centuries to cross its thickness. Our solar system is way off to one side of this watch, near the rim."

Now we know that there is no fixed material particle anywhere. Everything in the universe is constantly in motion. Indeed, this colossal watch-like disk, which we call the Milky Way, is as a whole itself in motion. Has it a period of rotation? Is there such a thing as a cosmic day?

This is one of the recent discoveries of Prof. Shapley, whose work has been described as "of Copernican dimensions." He has shown that as a whole the Milky Way is turning around the center of the universe with a velocity of more than 200 miles a second. Thus it makes a complete revolution every 300,000,000 years. Succinctly stated, a cosmic "day" or celestial "day" is three hundred million of our earth years!

This vast, overwhelmingly immense movement of revolution has its analogy in the rotation of a grindstone. The nearer to the center a star is, the more rapidly does it move round and round. Our own little galaxy is rotating also in a general northerly direction in connection with other galaxies, "like a golden top spun by a God across celestial floors."

LISTEN, WORLD!

By Elsie Robinson

I RUN a "sob column" and I hear a great deal about love. I hear about it in hundreds of letters a week. All the writers of these letters believe that love is the greatest thing on earth.

By love they mean that glowing delight, that hunger and ecstasy which beset the soul at the advent of another, particular human being. My writers think that when this phenomenon has once happened to two people, all good things should follow after. They're sure that—

People should be happy and content together—if they love.

People should respect each other—if they love.

People should seek each other's advice—if they love.

People should be loyal—if they love.

"I love him so," they wail, "how can he act that way!"

And there is anger as well as grief in that wail. They feel they have been cheated and wronged, for they are sure that love should be enough to insure perfect human response. But it isn't.

LOVE, FOR ALL ITS WARMTH AND DELIGHT, ISN'T ENOUGH TO INSURE HAPPINESS AND HARMONY BETWEEN TWO PEOPLE.

We must have much more than love to give if we would win another's respect, confidence and loyalty.

WE MUST ESTABLISH AND MAINTAIN A RECORD FOR FIRST-CLASS HUMAN BEHAVIOR.

People won't rely on us merely because we touch their springs of tenderness in occasional moments. Reliance is an extremely practical affair. It is given only when it is earned. We rely on those who prove reliable—and this applies as much to the married estate as to any other.

People won't confide in us merely because we have kissable lips. Our lips may be soft as satin and crimson as cherries, but if the sounds that issue out of them are nonsense, the loved one will cease to listen.

Nor will people be loyal to us merely because we have given them hours of delight, of uttered vows together. Man is a selfish animal. He (or she) is loyal only to that which serves his (or her) need. Loyalty does not persist without service.

It is especially hard for women to understand this. They feel that, having once been an object of worship, they should automatically remain so.

"Before we were married he said I was his inspiration," they cry, "and now look at him. He's absolutely indifferent to me. He treats me as if I were a piece of furniture—"

Inspiration, also, is another thing that doesn't Just Happen. No one stays inspired by us unless we supply the stuff of inspiration. A nice kissing technique doesn't constitute inspiration—nor does an ability to embroider fancy cushions. There must be memories which will spur us on to new endeavor—qualities which feed our fainting souls like bread and wine. The thought of suffering endured together—of mutual laughter—mutual hope and sacrifice—the constant spectacle of patience, courage, honesty, good nature, tenderness.

And all these things mean work! YOU CAN'T BE LAZY AND STAY LOVED!

DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 8.—To my notion the two most romantically interesting cities in America are New Orleans and San Francisco. Certainly, outside of Paris, no city has learned so successfully to mix work and play and enjoy life to the fullest as this.

San Francisco is modern and newly built yet its historic past sticks through. Along its torturous up and down hill paths as well as along broad flat avenues you feel the breath of old Spain, of the Argonauts, of the Vigilantes, of Canton, of the mountains and the seven seas.

It is difficult to imagine that in the span of a single lifetime, San Francisco has sprung up from a tiny Mission rancho to one of the world's most cosmopolitan centers. Add to that the achievement of being leveled by fire and built up again in the interim.

I was fortunate on this trip to approach the city from beautiful Del Monte by motor in the sunny glare of a dew spangled morning. The tumbling hills seemed acrawl with life and the soaring skyline radiated splendor. The air was tangy—"Nature's own rouge," if you care for a Chamber of Commerce blurb.

When you come to San Francisco you must observe the climate and here's my notice: The difference between summer and winter temperature is 6.3 degrees. But if you are caught in late afternoon without a light overcoat when the fog and chill come up you are in for a mess of teeth chattering.

Market street is the city's Big Artery—its Broadway. If you get lost keep on walking. You always come back to Market. In fact the only way to keep off Market is to leave town. For a prairie boy, the city is utterly fascinating with its cyclorama of hills and majestic mountains with snowy finger tips.

There is Telegraph Hill. Also Nob Hill and Russian Hill—just to name a few of the seven. And if you want an eyeful of San Francisco that will leave you limp drive up to that figure eight motorway looping about the 900 foothills known as Twin Peaks. It is a swell cure for agnosticism.

San Francisco's acres of two storied frame houses with bulging bay windows are outmoded by its Montgomery street skyscraper and financial district and yet they strike this observer's fancy. They have a neat lace curtained domesticity that is no longer visible in New York. You think of one of Eddie Guest's sentimental beautitudes "a heap o' livin'" or something mushy like that.

Cafes are after the old world manner. In French places, Papa meets you at the door and seems tickled pink you are there. Mama sits complacently knitting at the cashier's desk. The Italian restaurants are also the leisurely sort where modern decorations are sacrificed for good cooking. The best of them cling to red plush furniture, mirrors with lump gilt frames—and always a friendly meowing cat.

San Francisco greets reference to fogs with a polite change of subject and yet this uneven phase of climate attracts more people than the city realizes. The fog has the thickness of pea soup, is clinging, damp and penetrating and comes up almost every day. Yet it wraps for a brief time the exotic peaks in a halo of mystery that is beguiling and nothing is more entrancing than to watch the mist evaporate, leaving the city stark and sheer on its mighty bluffs.

For reasons, which for the moment escape me, I accepted an invitation to a luncheon of all Chinese dishes. I yield to no one in my admiration for the Chinese for almost every virtue save the culinary. We used to slop the hogs with something like what I was served. And my eyes are still crossed from spearing a raw fish out of a bowl of I-don't-know-what.

The Orpheum theatre, cradle of the vaudeville circuit by that name, has finally hung up the shutters. It is like the passing of a rare old friend.

And the old Barbary Coast has the bleak desolation of an abandoned warehouse district. It was once my job—what a business I picked out!—to spend two weeks there learning of its vice for an Eastern newspaper. It was then the gayest place in the world.

OH, THESE WOMEN

By Leola Allard

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 8.—The devastating beauty of the Pacific coast women! You notice every beautiful girl in the East. Here they sell you ribbons, tie up oranges, sell theater tickets, wait on table, jerk soda, all beautiful. Any girl who thinks that she is beautiful at home and might do well out here is taking something more than a gambler's chance. Very beautiful girls are a drug on the market. Los Angeles has nothing else of but. If there is anything this town does not need, it is another beautiful woman.

An airplane swooped down at Albuquerque to take some stalled passengers of a fast train on to Los Angeles. An old Indian woman looked it over carefully and wanted to know if it flapped its wings when it flew.

The annual fiesta at Santa Barbara approaches. The men of the community of Santa Barbara all grow moustaches whether they want them or not, because it is part of the program. Last year they grew beards to fit the celebration, and the women are all glad only a moustache is required this year.

I saw a lady out in her yard draping cheesecloth, so fine that it looked like white cobwebs, over her magnolia trees. So their sun is pretty hot, even if they won't own up, and do insist that this is the only hot summer they can remember.

California resents the report that its suicide rate is high.

But after a booster gets hold of you, and trots you around for a week pointing out places of interest, all on top of, or overhanging a steep hill, you are not responsible for what you do. The cars have tops to keep the sun from sizzling you, and you have to hang your head out of the car windows first and THEN look up. Nothing this side of an ostrich could do it. A lot of people get so they do desperate things, notwithstanding the fact that you are told that California will resent it if you kill yourself.

What I'd like to have explained, is how the entire woman population, that puts up lunches and takes its families to the beaches, has been trained never to throw the tiniest bit of paper on the beach. I drove 20 miles along the crowded beach, and saw thousands of women and children, and nary an egg shell, an orange peel or paper bag. Nize people.

It's things like that that make easterners want to go home and sell out.

Wise Words

Revenge is always the weak pleasure of a little and narrow mind. —Juvenal.

Painting, with all its technicalities, difficulties and peculiar ends, is nothing but a noble and expressive language, invaluable as the vehicle of thought, but by itself nothing.

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

BECAUSE you have a check book, do you spend more money than you should?

It is easier for you to write a check than to hand out the money.

Have you failed to reach the point where you look upon the check as representing the amount for which it is written?

Can you not recall certain times when you have written checks for very unnecessary expenses over which had you been obliged to pay in currency from your pocket you would have hesitated?

You deposit a large percentage of your earnings, but at the end of the month you find your bank account has not increased much.

When you look over your returned checks you wonder how you ever had the thoughtlessness to spend so much on what would bring you so little.

You see that you might have saved many dollars if you had been careful.

But your regrets do not do you much good.

A savings account faithfully kept up might help you.

It would if you put it where you could not check it out.

Don't let your pen run away with your good judgment.

If you cannot control it, you will not add to your bank account.

Pictures Make Us Think

ing head of the government, Clemenceau was able to give to the Marshal the support that he needed.

The young Prince, in his fine uniform, probably looked on old Clemenceau that day, without realizing that but for Clemenceau he, the Prince of Wales, might be an exile from England, and a young Hohenzollern, son of the former Kaiser, might be sitting on the throne of King George.

Great power, great historical meaning in the faces of Foch who did the FIGHTING, and Clemenceau, who, with Lloyd George, did the THINKING and won the victory.

France will honor Clemenceau when he dies, as he must before many years in the natural course of events. And in honoring Clemenceau it will honor the man to whom France owes more than to any other man born within the last 100 years.
